DUNLOP is the SAFEST TYRE

THE ABERDEEN INDUSTRIAL SCHOOL PROJECT

The design for the magificent new building which is to serve the purpose of an Industrial School and Reformatory in the Colony. It is to be erected at Aberdeen and it is hoped to complete it in about twelve months. The cost of the building alone is estimated at about $250,000 and the equipment will also be costly.

IMPOSING BUILDING PLANNED

TOTAL COST LIKELY TO EXCEED FIVE LAKHS

URGENT SOCIAL NEED

("Telegraph" Special).

So much has been said of late on the subject of social services for the poor and needy in the Colony that the quiet efforts of a number of philanthropists who have associated themselves in bringing a special object to completion, have escaped general notice.

These are the group of leading businessmen headed by Mr. Li Yau-tsun, who have undertaken the immense task of building and financing an Industrial School and Home at Aberdeen for poor boys. The scheme has made sufficient headway for a definite start to be now made on the construction of the colossal structure required.

URGENT NEED.

An Industrial Home which is not necessarily a Reformatory (although it was the urgent need for this which gave the scheme its first impetus) has long been in the minds of those in close contact with certain aspects of the social problems of the Colony, and while an Ordinance providing for certain juvenile offences have come into being, its full application has been held up by the lack of a suitable Industrial Home and/or Reformatory in which children and young persons convicted under that Ordinance can be housed.

NO STIGMA.

The new Industrial School has been conceived comprehensively, that is to say that while it will serve as a reformatory for juvenile offenders will essentially be what its name implies—a centre where trades can be learned, where young persons other than juvenile offenders are given a useful start in life, and where this assistance can be rendered without the stigma that is usually attached to a reformatory.

Such a scheme necessarily calls for the co-operation of more than one section of the community, and while Government is nominally in charge of the undertaking, it has been found effective to bring in two other groups.

One of these groups are the philanthropists already alluded to, and the other is the Salesian Order, members of which has earned recognition by the useful work they have locally achieved in the institution known as the St. Louis Industrial School at West Point.

COST AND OPERATION.

In effect, the co-operation may be briefly described as follows:

Government to give a free site.

The merchants and philanthropists to finance the building and, it may be, the equipment.

The Salesian Fathers to be given charge of the building and tuition of the boys when completed.

The site for the School at Aberdeen is situated near the former Paper Mills, and the building to be constructed on it is the imposing one seen in the architect's illustration.

The shell alone will cost $240,000, and other features including the clock-tower and terrazzo and other ornamental work for which there are separate contracts will have brought the total structural cost to $320,000. The equipment required will be for printing, tailoring, shoe-making, machine and carpentry shops, and will have brought the total cost of the scheme to nearly half a million dollars in its fullest development.

Messrs. Hazeland and Gonella are the architects, and Messrs. Cheong Hing Co. are the contractors, concrete work (reinforced) not be necessary [illegible] million

AMAZING GALE FREAK

A CHURCH TURNED ROUND

FRONT DOOR AT BACK

Mexico City, Sept. 17.

One of the most extraordinary of hurricane "freak" results is reported as the result of another terrific and disastrous gale which swept the Mexican coast to-day.

A church at Oriental was blown completely round as if on an axis, and the back door is now at the front!

At least ninety-one persons are known to have been killed by the hurricane, which wrecked buildings in the coast towns, hundreds being injured by collapses.

Another hundred persons were drowned at San Luis Postosi, when the Santiago River burst its dam.

NEW TRACK RECORD

LUIGI BECCALI'S FEAT

J. E. LOVELOCK FAILS

Milan, Sept. 17.

The feature of the athletic contest between Great Britain and Italy, which was won by Italy by 83 points to 62, and by nine events to five, was the breaking of the world's fifteen hundred metres record.

This brilliant achievement was credited to Luigi Beccali, Italy's Olympic champion, who clocked 3 mins. 49 seconds, dead, beating the record by one-fifth of a second.

The old record of 3 mins. 49 1/5th seconds was established by Jules Ladoumegue (France), a crack runner who was subsequently deprived of his amateur status.

While Luigi Beccali was beating the record, an attempt to do so was being made in Paris by J.E. Lovelock, who was responsible for a sensational world's mile record a month or two ago.

He failed to-day, his time being 3 mins. 52 4/5ths. Chief reason for his failure was lack of opposition.—Reuter.

HONGKONG AND P.I. MINE STOCKS

GREAT FUTURE FOR INVESTORS

Manila, Sept. 15.

Hongkong investors and business men are greatly interested in Philippine gold mining ventures and are keenly watching the flurry in stocks, according to Mr. A. A. Botelho at present a visitor in Manila.

Mr. Botelho who is agent for Sorox in Hongkong, arrived in Manila on a business trip from Hongkong.

Baguio Gold and Antamok are the favourites of Hongkong investors but other mining stocks are also being bought, Mr. Botelho declared. It is said that Hongkong business men are preparing to make heavy investments in Philippine mining stocks.

"If the trip to Hongkong could be shortened by means of a regular air service, investments would increase tremendously," Mr. Botelho said. "Gold mining," he continued, "is going to be one of the major sources of wealth in the Philippines."

A cemetery for Chinese Christians, with an area of about 10,000 square feet, is being set aside at Castle Peak.

THREATENED SPLIT IN CABINET

MANY INJURED IN RIOTS

VIENNA, SEPT. 17.

WITH A CABINET SPLIT THREATENED AND SERIOUS RIOTING AT GRAZ AND IN CARINTHIA, AUSTRIA IS IN POLITICAL FERMENT.

Her fate may be decided in the next two or three days. Herr Winkler, leader of the National Front, has come out firmly in opposition to the Fascist activities of the Heimwehr and has warned Dr. Dollfuss that he must choose between Fascism and anti-Fascism.

Serious rioting occurred to-day at Spittal-Anderdran, in Carinthia, as a result of the direct action tactics of the Heimwehr.

Six civilians, two policemen and a military officer, were seriously injured during the disturbance. Troops were compelled to charge with fixed bayonets before demonstrating peasants were dispersed.

The cause of the outbreak was purely political.

The peasants were demanding the reinstatement of the Governor of Carinthia, whom the Heimwehr removed from office.

The spirit which provoked the disturbance is spreading to other quarters.

Serious dissensions within the Austrian Cabinet which are likely to considerably embarrass the Chancellor, Dr. Dollfuss, in dealing with the Austro-German question, were revealed at Graz this afternoon.

The disclosure was made by the Vice-Chancellor, Herr Winkler, at a press conference which followed upon the riotous accompaniment to an attempt by Nazis to break up a demonstration by Herr Winkler's National Front.

SMOKE BOMBS.

Smoke bombs were hurled into the crowd by about two hundred Nazis, who revealed themselves by raising their hands in a Hitler salute during the playing of the Austrian national anthem.

An infuriated crowd launched an attack immediately after the throwing of the bombs. Ten persons, including women, were burned, eight of them being sent to hospital. Ten of the Nazis barely escaped being lynched. Mounted police charged and scattered the Nazis.

THREAT TO RESIGN.

The affair was bitterly referred to by Herr Winkler when that press representatives later.

He practically threatened to resign his post in the capital and has more or less presented Dr. Dollfuss with an ultimatum.

He declared that the National Front rejected any form of Fascism, adding that the recent activities of the Heimwehr (the Fascist organisation under Prince von Starhemberg) had become intolerable.

DR. DOLLFUSS WARNED.

"A position has been reached as a result of their activities," he said, "where Dr. Dollfuss must make up his mind what course he is going to follow."—Reuter.

The ship sprung a leak, owing to a plate near the keel cracking, and was returning to Yokohama to have this plate replaced before proceeding on her voyage. She was due in Yokohama yesterday evening, and is expected to resume her voyage in a few days.

A BILLION YEN LOAN

GENERAL ARAKI'S DEMAND

Tokyo, Sept. 13.

The Nichi Nichi asserted to-day that Gen. Araki is urging other members of Premier Saito's cabinet to float a domestic bonds loan for one billion yen which the War Minister declared to be necessary to strengthen the Japanese army and navy "in view of the strained international situation."

Gen. Araki proposes that emergency taxes yielding 50,000,000 yen a year be levied to pay interest and amortization charges on the loan, which would be handled apart from the regular budget.

The proceeds of the huge loan would be used to finance the navy's programme to build to the limits permitted under the London Treaty and complete the army's replenishment programme.

DEADLOCK THREAT

Manila, Sept. 15.

The Philippines Legislature spent another fruitless day yesterday trying to reach a definite understanding on the right method of disposing of the Hawes-Cutting-Hare law.

Senate President Quezon met with majority senators and subsequently with Senator Sergio Osmena, minority leader, but was unable to announce any definite choice between the plebiscite proposal and a national convention.

He declared that the majority senators had no strong preference between the plebiscite and national convention schemes but that the minority members of the legislature appeared inclined to favour the convention plan in the face of the apparent impossibility of getting the majority to amend the plebiscite bill.

The solution to the dilemma did not seem any nearer than it was weeks ago when the representatives announced their intention to see the plebiscite plan through while the minority as tenaciously insisted that the plebiscite bill must be amended if the legislature wanted it adopted.

The situation took on a new angle when reliable sources reported that the majority senators were lining up against the plebiscite in favour of the convention plan.

With the minority inclining in favour of the convention, observers declared that a deadlock is likely between the Senate and the House.

Children Grow Timid When Strangers Distrust Them

By Olive Roberts Barton

Frank, aged five, was playing De Soto—his tour of exploration being limited to the block in which he lived instead of the Mississippi Valley.

He saw a big white dog cross the block of grass in front of a house and trot around to the back yard. Frank crossed the grass and followed the dog.

The Millers were on the porch. "Hey there, boy, keep off the grass. What are you doing here?" boomed Mr. Miller's voice from behind the vine.

Ordered Away

Frank stopped like a startled deer, then padded back to the pavement as fast as he could go. His eyes were big. Nobody had ordered the dog away. But then, he was a boy!

He went along for a couple of houses and sat down on some steps. It was nearly bedtime and he was tired.

Two rose bushes grew on either side of the top step. He crawled over to one and smelled the single big red rose that was out.

A girl on a bicycle rode up to the steps and dismounted. "Don't touch that rose," she said sharply. "Run along home. If I hadn't come you would have pulled it, wouldn't you."

"I was just smelling it."

Frank obeyed. At least he left the steps. He stood looking up and down the street. He didn't want to go home. That meant bed. He proceeded with his cruising.

In "Wrong" Again

A green car stood beside the curb. It looked like Uncle Mack's car but he knew it wasn't. However, he sat down on the running board and, picking up some little twigs, laid them beside him. He made a square and big "A" and an "M."

"Scram!" yelled a young man slamming a screen door. "Beat it, kid. But clean off that mess first. Of all the impudence!"

Frank brushed off the twigs and walked away backwards, his finger in his mouth, big eyes staring at this new Nemesis.

Finally he turned and ran.

Before he got home again, however, he had been told by a cross old man who had to step sideways to get out of his road to "watch where he was going," had been ordered away from a parked baby carriage into which he was peeping, and had had a child's wagon jerked from under him by an impatient mother who accused him of being about to steal it.

Mother's Affection

At last he started home. He hadn't gone far when he heard his mother's anxious voice calling "Frankie!" over and over.

"Goodness but I was worried!" she cried. You mustn't wander away, dear. Someone might want a nice little boy and take you away."

"Do people like boys?" asked Frank.

"Like them!" She gave him a big hug and cuddled him on her lap. "Like them. I should say so. That's what little boy are for, to make people happy. There, dear," she slid him down. "Get it." Mrs. Simpson next door was holding out a bouquet.

Frank went over slowly, took the bouquet, and ran.

"Thank you," called his mother. Then, "You mustn't be so scary, dear. They like little boys."

Frank yawned. If he had been ten years older he would have answered that with the well-known Bronx cheer.

A CINEMA FAVOURITE DONE UP BROWN

Sally Eilers

Organdie is an ideal fabric for summer evening dresses and plaids are chic! You can't go wrong if you wear either one, or both.

Sally Eilers combines these two fashion highlights and wears a brown organdie dance frock, plaided in yellow and white with a fine stripe of scarlet.

The sleeves are a series of ruffles and the skirt falls from a tight yoke into the fullness which also spells smartness this season. Sally wears brown satin sandals with this costume.

GLORIFYING YOURSELF

By Alicia Hart

You'll see your beauty eye to eye if you invest in some of the newest eye cosmetics.

A famous French manufacturer of cosmetics rises up to assert that American women treat their eyes with not enough consideration. He says that they make bigger mistakes when they choose eye cosmetics than they do choosing all other cosmetics put together.

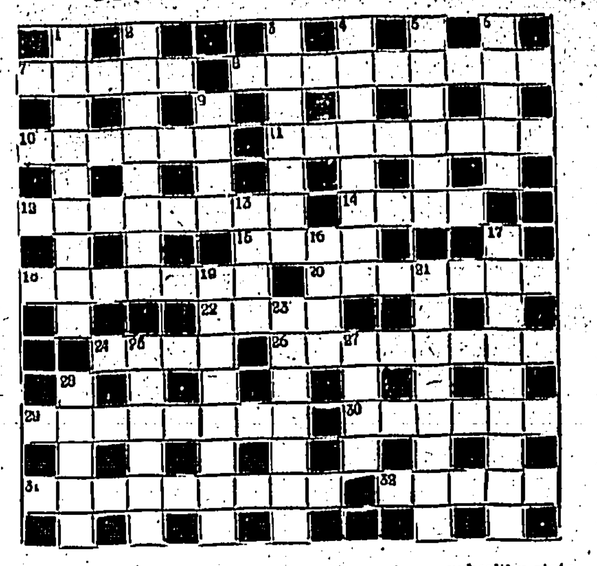

In the first place, your eyes are the most important part of your face. Portrait painters and artists of all time have said that a woman with beautiful eyes could be handsome even if the rest of her features were not so good looking.

In view of that, you should begin at once to take proper care of your eyes and use only cosmetics which are suited to them.

Eye shadow is exactly what the name implies! You don't use it merely to add a touch of green, blue, brown or black to your face. Eye shadow should be the shade of the natural colour of the shadow over your eyes. Get a hand mirror and study the shade of the skin above your eyes. Your eye shadow should match it exactly. If it is a greyish brown colour, (that's the most common shade of women's eyelids), don't get blue or plain brown eyeshadow. Get one which is greyish brown! And use it sparingly!

Don't blend eyeshadow out on your cheeks unless the natural shadow extends that far. Always stick to the natural. You can't make over your face and its shadows anyway. The best you can do is to make the natural shadows show up to advantage.

For the LOVE of EVE by Lucy Walling

CHAPTER XXIV

The announcement of Marya's marriage plans came as a distinct shock to Eve. The girls had worked together for several years. Marya was blessed with a tranquil disposition that often served as oil on the troubled waters of office trials.

For a while Marya had been watching sales and making purchases for her hope chest, for it was a tradition among Marya's people that a bride should go to her bridegroom with a complete equipment of linens, cooking utensils and silver. Marya's parents also purchased her dining room furniture as a wedding gift. An uncle invited her to choose a living room suite as his gift. Marya was to take to her new home the bedroom furnishings that had been hers since her 21st birthday. Thus the new home would be practically equipped.

Marya and Ray had spent many Sundays driving about the city, stopping now and then to look at houses in new allotments. Marya had always maintained that she wanted a little gray bungalow when she married but a red brick house completely captured her fancy. There was a beamed ceiling in the story-and-a-half living room. The dining room was elevated a trifle with a wrought iron bannister beside its three steps. In one bedroom the walls were panelled with an English garden scene and here she planned to place her mahogany bed, using a light green spread and draperies. In the other bedroom gay nasturtiums trailed over the walls. This room was to have furniture enamelled green.

Colourful floral wall paper adorned the breakfast room. The recreation room in the basement appealed to Ray. There was a nursery upstairs with cunning Mother Goose figures on the wall and light pink woodwork and beside it was another well-lighted room which would serve as Marya's studio.

It really seemed to be an ideal home. For Ray's parents it was the culmination of years of thrift to know that their son could purchase such a house. Ever since he had received his first earnings Ray's father and mother had coached him to prepare for a future home of his own. Hence, though only in the middle twenties, Ray and Marya were to start married life with no debts except the monthly payments arranged to complete the purchase of their home.

Marya and Ray had asked Eve and Dick to drive out to see the house before the final papers were signed. Dick declared it to be well built and, according to the prevailing market, a good buy. Eve thought the house was perfect and she came back to the apartment with a wistful longing for such a home of her own.

"Never mind, sweetheart!" Dick told her. "You'll probably get everything you want some day but you can't expect it all at once."

"Yes, and now I have my career," Eve answered, instantly optimistic. "Lots of women who spend their days with dustmops and ironing boards would be glad to exchange them for a chance at a job like mine. Besides they say everything comes to him who waits."

And so Eve helped Marya shop during their noon hours. Arlene never accompanied them on these shopping trips.

"Honestly," Arlene confided to Eve, "I can't work up much excitement over household doowhackets. I'll probably wait until I'm 100 yards the other side of the altar and then go on a buying spree! The advantage of that will be that I'll have the very last word in floor-waxers and washlines, I suppose!"

The week before Easter Marya met Ray daily for luncheon. Eve and Arlene attended Lenten services each noon. On Good Friday they met Mr. Bixby coming from the church and Eve's heart warmed toward the white-haired old man as he bowed to them with dignity.

"The old lamb!" said Arlene. "To think I usually tremble in my boots when he enters the office!"

Saturday Marya spent her last day at the store. She had worked industriously to prepare advance drawings so that the advertising office could run smoothly for a week in case they found no one to take her place immediately.

Marya's eyes were misty when she finally cleared her desk and packed her personal belongings. Several girls from other departments came in to bid her goodbye and Barnes called her into his private office for a brief session. Then it was closing time and Marya made a last survey of the familiar room. "Oh, Eve!" she cried, "I'm going to miss you dreadfully! What shall I do without this office?" Eve put firm arms about Marya and led her to the locker room.

* * *

After lunch Sunday, Eve and Dick joined the Easter parade on the avenue. The sun shone brightly and here and there before a pretentious home yellow and lavender crocuses raised their heads from the green grass. They saw Mona Allen wearing a new black coat, lavishly trimmed with black fox. Framing her face was the hat with the halo of white violets which Eve had wanted to buy.

Eve and Dick ate a late dinner and then strolled through the park to the Art Museum where they enjoyed the organ recital.

Marya's wedding took place next day. Eve felt that she would never forget the lovely picture Marya made as she came down the aisle of the church on the arm of her white-haired father. The organ was sending forth the strains of the bridal chorus from "Lohengrin." Eve brushed her eyes with a wisp of lace handerchief while Arlene let the tears roll frankly down her cheeks.

Marya wore a severely simple white satin frock with long tight sleeves and a long train. Her veil was arranged cap fashion above her broad white forehead. She carried a sheaf of calla lilies. The altar was banked with Easter lilies, and seven-branch candelabra lighted the path of the bride. Marya had but two attendants—fair-haired cousins gowned in pink and blue lace frocks.

After the ceremony there was a reception. Later that evening Marya changed into a dove gray travelling costume trimmed with fluffy gray fox. And before anyone was aware of it she and Ray had slipped away from the others and fled in a taxi to the Union Station where they boarded a train for New York.

Marya's wedding was the sort Eve had once planned for herself. She knew she would always remember that wedding as one of the loveliest she had attended. She knew too, that she would miss Marya from the office but that their friendship was the sort that would last.

Later as Eve and Dick went up the steps of Mrs. Brooks' house they heard their telephone ringing. "Wonder if something is wrong on the job," Dick said as he fitted the key into the lock.

Eve was amazed to hear that the call was for her. "This is the Times advertising department," came the voice over the wire. "We are calling about the Bixby advertisement for to-morrow. Mr. Barnes said he left the copy with you this afternoon. We've been trying to get you all evening. Our deadline is 10:15, and it's nearly that now. What shall we do?"

Eve's knees seemed to go limp. "How dreadful!" she exclaimed. "I left the copy in an envelope on my desk addressed to The Times. Are you sure it wasn't there?"

"The boy said he and Barnes looked all over for it and then decided you must have taken it with you," the voice answered.

"Heavens! I'll have to try to get into the office and then call you back from there!" Eve answered.

"Dick, Dick!" she cried. "We've got to go to the store right away to see if I can find the copy for to-morrow's Times. Oh, this is terrible! There's a special sale scheduled and if that ad isn't in the morning paper I'll lose my job! We've got to hurry—the deadline is at 10:15 and there isn't a minute to spare!"

Dick got out the car and they drove without a word until he made an abrupt stop at the side entrance to Bixby's. To Eve it seemed forever before the night watchman arrived in answer to her frantic summons.

LINER DISABLED

CANADIAN PACIFIC SHIP'S ENGINE TROUBLE

Yokohama, Sept. 17.

The Canadian Pacific liner Empress of Canada, which left Yokohama on Friday for Honolulu, has wirelessed the Agents, stating that she is returning to Yokohama owing to engine trouble.—Reuter.

Among the Hongkong embarkations were Mr. and Mrs. F. W. Tyson, of the Socony-Vacuum Company, Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Stewart, of the Union Insurance Company, Mr. Stanley R. Dodwell, Mrs. A. L. Shields and Mr. H. G. Sheldon.

FATAL AIR CRASH

CHAMPION JOCKEY HAS NARROW ESCAPE.

London, Sept. 16.

Captain Pennington, an R.A.F. airman with a distinguished war record, received fatal injuries when a ten seater de Havilland "Dragon" aeroplane which he was piloting crashed near Doncaster last evening.

The aeroplane was taking off when it crashed into a hedge, the under part of the machine being torn away. The machine was completely wrecked.

There were six passengers in the machine but they either entirely escaped or were only slightly injured. All had been attending the Doncaster Race meeting.

The passengers included Gordon Richards, the champion jockey, who yesterday won five out of six races in which he rode.

Richards has ridden 184 winners this season. As the flat racing season closes in November, he still has a chance of beating the record of Fred Archer, who in the 1885 season, rode 246 winners.—British Wireless.

REDS ROUNDED UP

MANY LEADERS ARRESTED AT CHENGTU

Nanking, Sept. 16.

Important Captives.

Nanking, Sept. 16.

Among the fifty Communists arrested at Chengtu were Lin Wan-hsuan and Tsen Shao-chow, who returned to China in 1931 to direct Communist activities after many years spent in Soviet Russia, and Lo Chang-an, a member of the "Szechuan Provincial Soviet."

Information received in Nanking states that the Red organization in Szechuan has suffered a heavy blow through the arrests. It is stated that forty Communists of lesser importance have renounced their faith and have volunteered to assist in the anti-Red campaign.

It is also said that a reapprochment has been effected between Liu Hsiang and Liu Wen-hui, following the latter's offer to join the forces operating against the Communists.—Reuter.

You will lose your teeth! through Neglect

PYORRHEA'S attack is invisible

THE ugly mouth disease, Pyorrhea, can lurk for 10 years, unnoticed. It is an invisible enemy which attacks the gums. But only later makes itself known in many horrible ways. Its first warning may be your tooth brush—just a bit pink from bleeding gums. Then the gums get soft, spongy, tender. Next the teeth loosen in their sockets and what may happen then, worst of all, the teeth drop out, or have to be pulled out!

The price you pay for neglect, is the dreaded disease, pyorrhea, and all of its attending ills.

Loss of teeth often leads to general bad health and loss of vitality. Your healthy smile disappears and with it, popularity and admiration . . . and your friends!

You don't have to risk this! Start now. Save your teeth. Use Forhan's for the Gums. More than an ordinary tooth paste, it prevents pyorrhea. It will keep your gums healthy, your teeth beautifully white, and sound. Remember, there is no substitute for fine, healthy teeth and the smile of youth and no finer dentifrice than Forhan's for the Gums.

* * *

Forhan's for the Gums is the formula of R. J. Forhan, D.D.S., specialist in mouth diseases. It contains Forhan's Pyorrhea Astringent developed by Dr. Forhan and used by dentists throughout the world in the treatment of pyorrhea.

CHINA EMPORIUM

THOUSANDS TEEND THE OPENING CEREMONY

Thousands packed the China Emporium, Hongkong's, newest departmental store, in Queen's Road Central, when it opened its doors for the first time for business on Saturday. A dense mass of humanity struggled through from floor to floor up to Chinese tea-garden and amusements resort on the roof of the six-storeyed building, and then down again, and so it continued for the greater part of the day, as Hongkong satisfied its curiosity and speculated on the values of the hundred-and-one lines of goods carried by the modern departmental shop.

To mark the important event, the Directors and management held a reception in the European cafe on the fourth floor. The official guests, including the Hon. Sir Henry Pollock and the Hon. Mr. R. H. Kotewall, were received by Hon. Sir Shou-son Chow, Chairman of the Board of Directors. This was followed by a number of addresses, the ceremony concluding with the presentation to the Chairman by Mr. W. C. Felshaw, on behalf of the architects, Messrs. Little, Adams and Wood, of a silver cigaretto box, suitably inscribed.

Chairman's Speech.

Sir Shou-son Chow, welcoming the guests, said:—As you all know, there are already several other departmental stores in different parts of the Colony, but the locality we have chosen is, we think, one that serves a large section of the community and is particularly convenient to residents of the Middle Level and the central part of the City.

It is not our intention to enter into competition with other departmental stores, as we feel that Hongkong is, after all, not so small a place as not to admit of the establishment of another emporium such as ours. I, for one, feel that in spite of the general depression, there is still ample scope in the Colony for the promotion of legitimate business enterprises.

It is true that Hongkong, like the rest of the world, has not escaped the depression, but we have no reason to be pessimistic. World economic problems will find a solution sooner or later, and it is only a question of time when Hongkong will regain its former prosperity.

Fine Building.

We have seen many imposing buildings erected in the Colony in recent years. Our is a combination of Chinese and Western architecture, designed and supervised by Messrs. Little, Adams and Wood to whom my fellow-Directors and I wish to tender thanks and congratulation on the successful completion on their difficult task.

We have this day launched a new enterprise—an entirely new business in a new building, stocked with new goods, run by a new staff. As everything is new to us, I fear that, at the beginning, we may not be able to come up to your expectation, and I therefore crave your indulgence, which I feel we shall have.

It only remains for me to assure the public of our best services in every respect, and our earnest endeavours to live up to our motto, which is "Efficiency and Courtesy."

Sir Henry's Speech.

Replying on behalf of the guests, Hon. Sir Henry Pollock said:—I have been asked by my Honourable friend, Sir Shou-son Chow, the Chairman of the Board of Directors, to say a few words upon the occasion of the opening of this great emporium.

There can be no doubt, from the inspection which I have made of these premises, that we have here a very up-to-date concern, which bears every promise of a very successful future.

Perhaps you will kindly permit me to refer to a matter which I naturally have very much at heart.

Speaking as a Briton and as an old resident in this British Colony where Chinese and British interests are so closely bound up together, I would venture to urge the Directors of this Company to deal as largely as possible in British and in British Empire goods.

In support of this appeal of mine, I would urge the two following considerations: firstly, that British goods have a deservedly great reputation throughout the world for their excellent quality and finish; and secondly that, whilst many other international exchanges at this time of world crisis have been rocketing up and down, the rate of exchange between our local dollar and the pound sterling has remained remarkably stable by comparison.

Ladies and gentlemen, I will not detain you longer, but will ask you now to join with me in drinking to the long and continuous success and prosperity of this Emporium.

Faith in Colony.

Speaking in Chinese, Hon. Mr. Kotewall, who offered congratulations on behalf of the Chinese guests, said that the Founders and Directors, by establishing this additional emporium at a time when the Colony's trade was not as good as it should be, had demonstrated in a very concrete manner their faith in the Colony. It was an example which might well be copied by others who have capital to invest in commercial undertakings in Hongkong.

He heartily wished the Company the success which the Directors had earned by their courage and enterprise.

The Directors of the Company are the Hon. Sir Shou Son Chow, (Chairman), Messrs. Kan Tong Po, Fung Fook Tin, Chan Lim Pak, Wong Kwok Shuen, Li Tse Fong, Pun Hui Cho, Chow Chi Nam, P. K. Kwok, Chan Tse Kei, and the late Mr. Chau Yue Tong; with Mr. Chan Harr as general manager.

POLITICAL UNITY

DE VALERA AND LABOUR REACH AGREEMENT

London, Sept. 17.

Addressing an audience of 20,000 people in Cork, Mr. de Valera announced that the Government and the Labour Party had agreed on all main issues of policy that were likely to arise during the lifetime of the present Dail. Hence, there would be no elections in the near future.

In his first public reference to the new United Ireland Party, Mr. de Valera described the National Guard as a military wing of the new party.

He added that the government would not permit any military movement to develop under cover of party politics.

De Valera did not spare his own supporters when he condemned the raids on shops and premises selling British beer and similar "shameful incidents."

He warned the authors of the raids that they were encouraging the British and discouraging every sane and patriotic Irishman.—Reuter.

LOVER OF ANIMALS

FAMOUS PUBLISHER AND SOCIAL REFORMER DIES

London, Sept. 16.

Humanitarian, social reformer, and a great lover of animals, Mr. Ernest Bell, M.A., head of G. Bell and Sons, Ltd., has died at the age of 82.

Whilst chairman of the great publishing company which bears his name, he managed to find time for many other interests. He was President of the Vegetarian Society, chairman of the Anti-Vivisection Society, treasurer of the National Council of Animals' Welfare, and a member of the Pit Ponies Protection Society.

Born in 1851, he was a son of the famous George Bell whose publishing career he followed with such success.

In 1893 he married Marie A. von Tavsen.

Mr. Bell was editor of the "All England Series of Athletic Sports" and published "Fair Treatment for Animals," "Bell's Joy-book," and a number of pamphlets on humanitarian subjects.

Sir Edmund Noot-Bower

The death is announced of Sir Edmund Ernest Nott-Bower, K.C.B. —Our Own Correspondent.

Sir Edmund Nott-Bower was Assistant Secretary to the Board of Inland Revenue from 1895 to 1902, becoming Commissioner, Deputy Chairman and Chairman by successive stages. He held his last office as Chairman throughout the Great War. The son of a Doctor of Civil Law, Sir Edmund was a Barrister himself and served as a Justice of the Peace for Surrey.

He married Louisa, daughter of Capt. J. C. Yorke, of Gwernant, Cardiganshire, and leaves a son and a daughter.

PHILADELPHIA'S STRIKE TIE-UP.

COAL CODE SIGNED BY OPERATORS

Philadelphia, Sept. 17.

The city's food supply is threatened seriously by one of the most complete general strikes in the history of the state. More than 5,000 lorry drivers, carriers of the city's provisions, are affected by the "lock-out" and are holding up by their idleness G$100,000 worth of foodstuffs, half of which are perishable.—Reuter.

Operators Sign.

Washington, Sept. 17.

The Coal Code has been signed by the operators.

General Hugh Johnson, the head of the National Recovery Administration, has been wrestling for weeks with the problem of a bituminous Coal Code, and last week threatened to recommend to the President that action be taken against the recalcitrant group.—Reuter.

Higher Prices.

Washington, Sept. 17.

Wholesale commodity prices were one per cent. higher during August than in July, according to the U. S. Labour Department, but the index figure is only 69.5, compared with 100 in 1926, which means a big decline on average since that time.—Reuter.

And pass around the wine,
Remember that abuse is vile
And use may be divine.
That Heaven in kindness sent the grape
For use of great and small;
That little fools will drink too much

BANK CONTROL

A rather startling interpretation is now being given to the announcement at the end of last week that the Reconstruction Finance Corporation is proposing to lend $1,000,000,000 to sound American banks. The banks are expected to re-lend the money at a slightly higher interest rate, the step being designed ostensibly to encourage financial houses to lend more freely to business and to industry and thus promote the recovery programme. It is nevertheless also being interpreted as a revolutionary movement designed to give the government virtual control of the banking system. The loan is reported as likely to be "floated" by the purchase of $1,000,000,000 worth of stock in banks throughout the country, thus giving, the government 25 per cent. of the ownership of bank capital. This huge government holding of bank shares would be sufficient to give virtual control of banking activities. The administration has disclaimed any intention of operating the banks, and asserts it is only interested in making the banks foolproof.

It is believed however that if the plan now under consideration in high government councils is adopted, it must be recognized as one of the most revolutionary steps in what is already being described as the greatest economic revolution ever known, although its fate is still uncertain. The object would be to gain control of banking policy, and the suggestion, whether true or not, lends added interest to the proposals of the British Labour Party outlined last week. The fact is that none but bankers, and not all of them, defend the existing banking system. It works too conspicuously in the financial interests of the few. It provides too frugally for the welfare of the whole industrial community. Production may, and does, languish. The dividends of the Banks may, and do, flourish. Industry cuts wages and salaries, sacks men, silences its machines. The Big Five in Britain pay from 14 to 18 per cent. in dividends. Leaders of industry, politicians, newspapers and economists explain that [illegible] But not everyone agrees about the precise shapes which reform should take. For want of that

NOTES OF THE DAY

FREE STATE POLITICS

There are two ways of looking at Mr. de Valera's announcement in Cork indicating that an early Free State election has been indefinitely postponed. It momentarily damps the hopes of the United Ireland Party without being altogether discouraging. Mr. de Valera has found it expedient to come to terms with the Labour Party, permitting the existing Government to survive, a step which can readily and probably correctly be interpreted to mean that the political atmosphere today is anything but strikingly propitious for the Fianna Fail. We have to credit Mr. de Valera with skill as a tactician. His rush election which took the opposition by surprise last year was a masterly stroke which reaped its due reward. To-day he dare not risk an appeal to the country; he finds himself instead compelled to appeal to his supporters to discover their common-sense, to refrain from the acts of terrorism which are losing him erstwhile allies on all sides.

* * *

I.R.A. CONTROL

If there were a chance of the Irish Republican Army and of Dublin's hooligan gangs responding to the appeal, Mr. de Valera might still hope for the future. But the I.R.A. has become too accustomed to dictate to be able to accept meekly any dictation. Postponing the election merely makes it more certain that when the mandate of the country is finally sought, the Fianna Fail will be swept away. That is always provided General O'Duffy does not find the delay fretting and make an attempt to force an issue by exploiting the Blue Shirts in political manoeuvres. That poor imitation of Continental Fascism were better allowed to fade quietly away, unmourned.

BUS SERVICES

There is something to be grateful for in the admission of the Kowloon Bus Company that the services it is providing are not the last word in efficiency. Such an admission does at least offer some sort of assurance that an attempt will be made to improve matters and the Company's letter to the K.R.A. makes certain promises and outlines definite lines of attack upon the problem. The solution is by no means easy. It is one thing to arrange perfect schedules and another to maintain them when buses are constantly breaking down. The maintenance of discipline among the staff would appear to be less difficult to tackle —until consideration is given to the low wage scale prevailing, if we are correctly informed. Low wages do not attract the right type of man and are false economy in the end, when buses are run to pieces years before their time. Government Royalty greediness, which comes into this issue, has undoubtedly played its part in the deterioration of the bus services on both sides of the Harbour, and the K.R.A. policy of suspending judgment for the time being is probably the fairest in all the circumstances.

KOWLOON AMENITIES

The Colonial Secretary seems destined to be deluged with letters from the K.R.A. on various matters involving the community welfare on the mainland. Offensive smells, the Salisbury Road bottle-neck, the provision of a typhoon signal at Kowloon City, the supervision of the children's playground and the again postponed covered way in the Ferry traffic circus were among issues considered at the monthly meeting and it might well be asked why some of them, of comparatively trifling cost, have not been removed from the sphere of correspondence long before this. Government finds money to spare to build quarters and residences for public servants, great and small; and an amenity like a typhoon signal must wait.

THE BOTTLE-NECK

Government is on safer ground when it declares that the cost of the removal of the bottleneck at Salisbury Road is no longer justified. The K.R.A. meeting wondered what factors have so changed as to lessen the urgency an improvement considered necessary some years ago. It seems very simple. The allotment to motor-users of the large parking space opposite the Y.M.C.A. [illegible] bottle-neck. If not by one-half, certainly on a scale sufficient to minimise the likelihood of serious congestion of other traffic. Mighty

IF I HAD A FORTUNE . . .

WHERE WOULD I LIVE?

Asks

ERIC LINKLATER

AUTHORS, uncaptured criminals, and winners of sweepstake prizes are among the few people at liberty to choose where they shall live. For the vast majority of people in this orderly and civilised world it is external circumstances that decide the question.

A man may, of course, choose between one suburb and another, and his wife can easily decide on a third. But except within these narrow limits of selection there is little freedom, for the demands of office, shop, factory, foundry, or professional connections speak in a stern, determined voice that must be obeyed.

And so one often hears people wistfully saying, "Oh, if only I were independent! If only I were at liberty to live just where I pleased!" And they think that if they had £30,000 in the bank, and the freedom which that sum can bestow, they would live happily ever after.

But as a matter of fact they would be faced with an appalling difficulty, especially if they had any imagination. For so many and various are the attractions of the world that it is by no means easy to decide where to live.

COMPANIONSHIP PROBLEM.

Perhaps you nurse a romantic nostalgia for the South Seas? But which of ten thousand islands, all unfamiliar, would you decide upon were you to win a fortune? And unless you propose to live like Crusoe in solitude, whom would you choose to accompany you and how would you persuade them that, for example, the Society Islands are preferable to the Marquesas, or that the amenities of Norfolk Island are superior to those of Bali, Honolulu, and Tahiti?

And at last, after a year of debate and two years of exploration, when eventually you had discovered some green paradise beside a lagoon of heaven's blue, would not the bliss of your existence be shattered by the realisation that you were 800 miles from the nearest dentist?

But, you say, you have no inclination for tropic islands. You have heard of the charms of Continental life, and a villa at any one of half a dozen places would suit you very well.

COUNTRY DRAWBACKS.

Alas! when you have settled down, there is a fall in sterling, the exchange goes villainously against you, and the income from even £30,000 shrinks like a cheap woollen bathing suit.

You return to England and take a cottage in Devonshire, and decide that home is best. But after your foreign travels, and because of your independence, you now adopt a critical attitude to your fellow-countrymen, and in summer the multitude of trippers offends you, and the winters you find dull because the neighbours are scarcely to your liking. You also hanker for the theatre, the restaurant galeties, and the hearty, bustle of London—and you hear of a pleasant and opportunely vacant house in Hampstead.

London at first delights you, but by-and-by boredom again descends on you, for now you have no work to do, and work, though undoubtedly a perversion, is the best and most satisfying of the perversions. So once more you seek distraction in travel, and to improve your mind you read widely as you go and so collect a vast number of books.

And as you pass from Egypt to India, from China to Japan and South America, your wife accumulates a huge quantity of curios, nick-nacks, and suppositious works of art. But what is the use of books unless you have a library, of curios unless you can display them for the delight and envy of your friends? So yet again you are forced to look for a house.

ATTRACTIVE LONDON.

It is, I think, regrettable that the majority of roads lead to London. It is wrong that London should draw from all other parts of the country with a force almost equal to that of gravity: for what I have said to authorship applies equally well to many other trades.

This tendency, however, is not new. Both Queen Elizabeth and King James I., if I remember rightly, realised its existence and deciding that it was contrary to the welfare of the country decreed that their nobility must spend long periods of time on their own estates.

Now there are still in existence territorial magnates and moneyed people with country residences, and it would be no bad thing if those Tudor and Stuart ordinances were revived and they were compelled to live in their country homes, not merely to own them from a distance. They could foster local life, industrially, socially, and even intellectually, and so provide rival centres of interest to London.

But perhaps it is impractical to expect legislation on such lines, and the problem of where to live, when it exists, must be answered individually.

It may not be so important, after all, as the companion question, how to live? And perhaps they be answered together: to my mind there is a great deal to be said for the cowboy fashion, the gold-seeker fashion, the war-time fashion of six months on active service and six days of magnificent abandon to luxury. Hard work and comparative solitude produce a Gargantuan appetite for pleasure, and then the sins of riotous living may be expiated in more hard work.

It is a good thing to live in the backwoods and at intervals descend on the city hungry and eager as a cowboy or a soldier on leave. "Live dangerously," is a motto for heroes, but "Live variously," is good advice for most people.

"Better buy now, mister. Prices are going up on this stuff."

The Very Idea!

EGGSTRAORDINARY

By Eddie Kelly, Eggspert.

MR. Wynne Jones admitted in Kowloon court the other day that when he was a kid he used to have a passion for sucking condensed milk from a tin.

We were the same way when we were a child, only eggs were our strong suit.

That's why we followed with so much interest the letters in a contemporary about the cruelty to hens at a recent gymkhana. It nearly yolk our heart.

We were talking to the Girl Friend about it when we took her out to dinner the other evening.

"Yes," she said, as we handed her the menu. "I think those beasts were disgustingly cruel to those poor hens. Do you know, Eddie, I think I'll have some chicken to-night!"

Not that chicken has anything to do with eggs. At least, very rarely. You've got to take the good with the bad when you emulate Mr. Wynne Jones' feat.

We used to be very fond of poultry once. They used to even call us the Poult Laurette where we had our last chicken farm.

But we had to give it up. Our hens learnt all about birth control, and used to lay their eggs standing up. This was the origin of scrambled eggs.

There were so many bad eggs in our hen house, too. Most of these ended by becoming hard boiled.

Even a hen house, like Chicago, can have its Al. Capon.

At the place where we have been staying since our creditors chased us out of our flat we have been fed nothing but bacon and eggs for breakfast. We're so sick of Bacon that we prefer even Robert Burns now. And even Bacon Burns.

In fact, our opinion of bacon and eggs is eggsactly what you think it is.

"I wonder," asks "Vinjar" in the South China Morning Post, "what the average resident would think if he were suddenly confronted by a lizard-like reptile?" BAH!

What's a mere lizard or two? What's a dragon? We've seen thousands of 'em.

"Vinjar" mentioned the monitor lizard seen on Lugard Road in January, 1930. We were one of the group of people who saw it. It was on January 1, which explains everything. The lizard ambled up to us, breathing fire. We fixed it by breathing our breath.

There are several lizards and reptiles inhabiting the swamps of Hongkong. We were in the Peninsula swamp one day when we were accosted by a couple. We are so inured to them that we took no notice, so they eventually went away and ordered their own drinks.

We never did care for lizards with watery eyes.

DANGEROUS

He first met her at the Hotel Roof Garden one Saturday evening, and noticed her expensive frock and the other things that went with it. But when she confessed a little later that she enjoyed cigarettes and cocktails he made up his mind to have nothing further to do with her. So it was not until Monday evening that he 'phoned her to go on a car ride with him.

RECIPE

Take one white sandy beach, three or four children, a couple of small dogs, a handful of spades and buckets, unlimited quantity of sea-water, and a pinch of sea-shells.

Mix the children, the dogs, the spades, and buckets together, and add to the beach, stirring constantly. Pour the sea water over the beach, sprinkle with shells, place under a clear blue sky, and bake the whole mixture in the hot sun [illegible] away to cool in a bath-tub. Serve [illegible] in bed.

Lawn Tennis Tournament To Start Next Month.

Entries for the Open Mixed Doubles lawn tennnis championship of the Colony will close on Monday, September 25 next. The first round matches will be played towards the middle of October.

The tournament, which is held under the auspices of the Hongkong Lawn Tennis Association, will be conducted as usual by the Chinese Recreation Club, who announce that the first round will not start before October 10, as previously arranged.

MUNN AND MUNROE.

Two Kowloon Cricket Club batsmen, F. A. Munn and D. H. Munroe, made impressive debuts in the Club's first trial match of the season on Saturday. Munn batted aggressively for 31, which included five boundaries. During his third wicket partnership with G. Lee, which realised 43 runs, he was particularly severe on the short balls on the off.

The pitch was soft after the heavy downpour on Friday night, and played too easily to make the trial a proper test.

U.S. AMATEUR GOLF TITLE.

Dunlap Puts Up Great Exhibition.

MARSTON OUTPLAYED.

Cincinnati, Sept. 16.

George Dunlap, who won the final of the American Amateur Golf Championship to-day, is the American Walker Cup player, who did so well in the British Championships earlier this year.

Meeting Max Marston in the final, Dunlap put up one of the greatest exhibitions of golf in the history of the championship, and won by six and five. He took only 68 for the morning round as compared with Marston's 77. The latter only won the seventh and eighth holes.

A feature of Dunlap's play was his marvellous approach shots, which were never once off the fairways.

Marston played occasional good golf, but his drives off the tees were wild, and his irons inaccurate.

"Bobbie" Jones, the ex-amateur champion of both America and Britain, said Dunlap's was one of the most brilliant rounds ever seen.

By holing out a 16-foot putt, Dunlap was eight up after the nineteenth, and nine up after the 22nd. when Marston missed a four-footer.

Marston made amends at the next hole by sinking an eight-foot putt to win the hole as well as winning the next two.

At the 26th hole, Dunlap was bunkered, and the 27th was halved.

Marston's score for the outward round was 36, while Dunlap took 38.

FAMOUS REFEREE.

Lou Magnolia Dies In New York.

New York, Sept. 17.

Lou Magnolia, the famous boxing referee, who officiated at the Scott-Sharkey fight in 1930 and at most of the famous championship battles in America since Willard's time, died in New York to-day.

Magnolia was a friend and intimate of the late "Tex" Rickard, and the two men were the kings of the fight world, the one as ring arbiter, the other as the most notable matchmaker of all time.

Magnolia was as colourful a figure as Rickard; was as well-known to the sporting world as Jack Dempsey, and as popular; but despite his wide knowledge of the boxing business he never entered into any shyster, commercially, save as the third man in the ring.—Reuter.

THE FOOCHOW SITUATION

ALARMS GRADUALLY DYING AWAY

Our Foochow Correspondent writes:—

It is now reliably reported that the Reds have retired from the neighbourhood of Yenping, but it is hard to be sure as no one has apparently been able to get through from Yenping to Foochow, and telegraphic communication is still broken. This lack of communication is attributed to "ordinary" bandits, who are very naturally taking advantage of the disturbed conditions to line their empty pockets.

The three American Dominican fathers in Kienning made an effort to get through to Foochow more than a week ago, but had to return to Kienning on account of fighting in the vicinity of Yenping. As far as I know, no other foreigners are in any up-river station; those who were on the point of going up after their holiday at Kuliang being still held up in Foochow.

It seems certain that no walled city was occupied by the Reds. Yangkow and Wangtai which they occupied near Yenping are unwalled market towns or large villages.

TROOPS IN CONFLICT.

The Chinese have latterly been more exercised over rumours of trouble between the different elements on the Government's side. Apparently Lu Hsing-pang and the XIXth Army have not been cooperating as they should, nor have the XIXth Army and the 56th division under Liu Ho-ting (who now occupies Kienningfu). And the Naval forces who were hurried into Foochow from Amoy and elsewhere were said to be prepared to challenge the XIXth Army, which has become very unpopular owing to the exorbitant taxation.

I hear, however, that the trouble has now been settled, and a compromise arranged, by which the Navy will control Nantai Island while the XIXth Army controls the City. One hopes a greater sense of security will soon prevail.

INTERNATIONAL SOCCER.

Ireland Defeat Scotland In First Game.

PENALTY MISSED.

London, Sept. 16.

Ireland created a surprise at Celtic Park to-day by defeating Scotland by two goals to one in the first International soccer match of the season.

Approximately 22,000 spectators watched the game, which was played in glorious weather.

Ireland attacked right from the start, and obtained an early lead through Martin, who put them further ahead just before the interval. They deserved their two-goal lead as they were playing the better football.

Scotland showed none of their traditional style after the interval, but played in hurricane fashion. McPhail scored for them after they had missed a penalty.—Reuter.

LOCAL HONG TENNIS.

Lane, Crawford Defeat H.K. And S. Hotels.

Messrs. Lane, Crawford Ltd., and the Hongkong and Shanghai Hotels, Ltd., participated in a friendly tennis match on the K.C.C. courts yesterday morning; the former winning by 56 games to 43. Each set was decided on eleven games.

C. Balman and H. Burson (Lane, Crawford) lost to P. H. Suckling and R. S. Capell, 3-8; beat W. H. Brown and E. O. Murphy, 7-4; beat E. H. P. White and Kirlovsky, 9-2.

T. Redmond and Hume (Lane, Crawford) lost to Suckling and Capell, 4-7; beat Brown and Murphy, 7-4; lost to White and Kirlovsky, 5-6.

KOWLOON RESIDENTS ASSOCIATION.

EFFORTS TO IMPROVE THE BUS SERVICES

The monthly meeting of the general committee of the Kowloon Residents' Association was held in St. Andrew's Church Hall last Thursday evening.

Mr. C. E. Terry (President), was in the chair and others present were Mr. J. H. Shaw (hon. secretary) Messrs. F. C. Mow Fung, F. H. Crapnell, H. F. Bunje, W. Goldenberg, C. M. Manners, C. M. Hall, R. Pestonji, D. W. Munton and T. B. Wilson.

Apologies for absence were received from Messrs. R. P. Phillips, E. Cock, Li Chor Chi, B.W. Tape. H. F. Un and B. Wylie.

General matters of interest to residents on the Peninsula were brought to the notice of members of the Committee and action taken thereupon.

With reference to the desire on the part of residents to have small taxi cabs available for hire at Kowloon Point, it was pointed out that while the Taxi Company concerned was prepared to station a number of these taxis at this point, for some reason there was Police objection to this being done. It was decided to approach the Police and endeavour to ascertain the reasons for refusal.

Offensive Smells.

No reply having been received from Government on the subject of offensive smell in certain areas in Kowloon, it was decided to carry forward the matter to the next monthly meeting.

A letter from the Kowloon Motor Bus Company was read. It was stated that every effort was being made to improve the bus services and the particular complaints made by the Association had been brought to the notice of the employees concerned, strict warnings having been given of dismissal should there be any recurrence of misbehaviour on their part.

It was also stated that new schedules to suit the requirements of passengers using the different routes had been prepared and submitted to the Police. The Bus Company had also agreed to the Association's suggestion to re-introduce second class fares on No. 5 Route.

It was decided to postpone further action in this matter in the hope that the promised special supervision and maintenance of existing schedules would provide a more satisfactory service.

Star Ferry Approach.

With reference to a repeated request to the Government to widen the "bottle-neck" at the Star Ferry approach, the Association had been informed that the Government did not consider the amount of traffic justified the expense of widening the roadway at this point. Surprise was expressed by members of the Committee at this statement and it was decided to obtain data in this connexion with a view to again taking up the matter with Government.

Correspondence was also read from Government in respect of the covered way at the Star Ferry.

A special sub-committee was appointed to deal with complaints concerning the Kwang Wah Hospital and to enquire into the working of that institution.

It was decided to write the Government making enquiry (1) as to the prospect of reopening a Public Dispensary in the Tsim Sha Tsui district and (2) requesting that consideration be again given to the Association's request that a Typhoon Signal be erected opposite Kowloon City Police Station.

Children's Playgrounds.

As the result of a sub-committee's report on the management of the children's playgrounds in Kowloon, it was also decided to approach Government and suggest that a Chinese uniformed watchman be on duty at each playground and that the whole of the playgrounds be placed under the general supervision of the recently appointed European supervisor of King's Park recreation grounds.

It was noted with satisfaction that overflow boards (penstock gates) were now in use at the Kowloon Reservoir. In this connexion it was recalled that last year when the Association advised the introduction of these over-flow boards, it was informed that the use of such were not considered justifiable.

CABINET REQUESTS RECALL

PAPAL NUNCIO IN PRAGUE

Prague, Sept. 17.

The Cabinet has decided to request His Holiness the Pope to recall the Papal Nuncio, Msgr. Pietro Ciriaci, to Rome to enable an official explanation of the letter Circiaci wrote to the leader of the Slovak Popular Party complaining that he had been insulted in Prague.

The non-Catholic press, following the publication of the letter, accused Msgr. Circiaci of interfering in the internal affairs of the country, and of attempting to incite the Slovaks to separate from the rest of the community.

AMAZING STELLA WALSH

100 METRES IN 11 8/10 SECS

NEW FIGURES FOR 60 METRES

Poznan, Poland, Sept. 17.

An astonishing track performance by Miss Stella Walsh, the Polish athlete saw new world's record figures established for 100 and 60 metres to-day.

Miss Walsh, who set up a new record for the 100 metres at the Los Angeles Olympics last year, lowered them to-day when she covered the distance in 11 8-10th seconds.

Her time at the Olympics was 11 9-10th seconds, when she beat Hilda Strike of Canada by two feet, with Wilhelmina Bremen (U.S.) and Eileen Hiscock (Britain) occupying third and fourth places respectively.

To-day Miss Walsh also covered 60 metres in 7 4-5th seconds, a new world record.—Reuter.

Amateurs Beat the Professionals

IN TENNIS MATCH

London, Aug. 27.

The amateurs beat the professionals in their annual tennis match at Devonshire Park Eastbourne, by 6—3. The amateurs owed their victory mainly to their superiority in doubles, for the singles resulted in a tie of three matches all, whilst in the doubles the professionals, whose opportunities for first-class doubles play are necessarily limited, were beaten in all three matches.

In the top match Maskell dominated the game with the superior spread of his ground shots. As the ball was keeping low Olliff was perpetually scooping them up, particularly on the backhand, and Maskell came up to the net and smashed. Olliff, in an endeavour to force the pace, tried to come to the net himself, but although he was half volleying brilliantly Maskell's passing shots and lobs were inspired and he made scarcely a mistake. Maskell finished the match with a cross court back-hand drive—a shot with which he had constantly scored—and a smash.

RESULTS.

Singles.—J. S. Olliff (Amateurs) lost to D. Maskell, 1—6, 1—6; H.F. David (Amateurs) beat T. C. Jeffery, 6—1, 6—2; C. R. D. Tuckey Amateurs) lost to F. H. Poulson, 3—6, 3—6; R. K. Tinkler (Amateurs) lost to C. R. Read, 2—6, 6—2, 9—11; I. H. Wheatcroft (Amateurs) beat A. C. Roberts, 7—9, 6—3, 10—8.

Doubles.—Olliff and Wheatcroft (Amateurs) beat Maskell and Jeffrey, 2—6, 6—4, 6—3; Tinkler and Tuckey (Amateurs) beat Pearce and Poulson, 6—4, 7—5; David and Ritchie (Amateurs) beat Read and Roberts, 6—1, 6—3.

BRITISH SUCCESSES

GERMAN TENNIS CHAMPIONSHIPS

CAPTURE LADIES DOUBLES

German players won three of the five titles in the German tennis championships held recently in Hamburg.

G. von Cramm again won the men's singles, Frl. Krahwinkel won the women's singles for the first time, and in partnership Von Cramm and Frl. Krahwinkel retained the mixed doubles championship.

Great Britain won the women's doubles championship for the fourth time since 1929 when Mrs. Pittman and Miss K. E. Stammers beat Miss E. M. Dearman and Miss N. M. Lyle in the final, and J. Satoh and R. Nunoi took the men's doubles title to Japan for the first time.

Great Britain's team of eight players gave a creditable account of themselves, and the experience of playing against some of the best Continental players should prove of benefit to their game. So many of Britain's leading players are abroad that the team nominated by the Lawn Tennis Association consisted largely of the coming generation of players, C. R. D. Tuckey being the only player ranked among our men, and Mrs. Pittman, Miss Stammers and Miss Lyle among the women.

It was not to be expected that the representatives would therefore prevail in the singles events with such players of class as Von Cramm, R. Menzel, J. Satoh, R. Nunoi, Frl. Krahwinkel and Mme. Henrotin in the lists. Nevertheless, Great Britain supplied finalists in the men's doubles, both pairs of finalists in the women's doubles and two pairs of semi-finalists in the mixed doubles.

CENTRE-FORWARD PROBLEM NOW SOLVED

(By "Veritas")

With all of the players worried by the powerful sun, the fast state of the ground and the very trying atmospheric conditions, the practise football match between Kowloon and the Recreio on Saturday, which saw the first appearance this year of these teams, suffered in quality of play and in interest to the spectators.

Kowloon supporters must have left the ground with rather mixed feelings. Although one felt instinctively that the team contained individual merit in abundance, there was a rather alarming lack of co-ordination.

This, of course can, and most probably will, be corrected during the next fortnight. No team is going to be judged conclusively on its first appearance, especially under conditions such as those which existed on Saturday.

For the last two or three years, Kowloon's big weakness has been in the forward line. The advent of Elliott suggests that this, in some measure, is to be removed this winter.

CONSTRUCTIVE PLAN.

But I am inclined to hazard that his presence alone will not prove sufficient to give that cohesive "pep" so badly needed.

Not that the Kowloon forward were a failure against the Recreio. If one judges according to the number of goals scored the very reverse is suggested.

But there was missing a constructive plan; forward line movements capable of breaking up a defence. But even this, I am willing to believe, will come in time. Players were obviously feeling their way on Saturday.

This was especially so with Elliott. Now and again he revealed a distinctive feature, as witness his preparative work for his second goal. It was a movement of clever football and showed quite clearly the possibilities of Elliott as a successful leader of the Kowloon attack.

GOAL SCORER.

Furthermore he can score goals. There is no hesitancy in this ex-Kent Leaguer when he is in front of goal. He uses feet and head with equal facility in guiding the ball to a resting place at the back of the net.

Kowloon are going to miss Bickford, but Blake, when he has conquered the intricacies of ball control, should make himself a useful successor. He has speed and is skilful in his centres.

V. White is a clever little footballer who is more likely to make openings for others to score than to find the net very often himself.

Webb's penchant for wandering, either to a fourth half position, or crowding on Elliott led to a general weakness on the right wing.

Hill was not served well on the wing, either by his vanguard colleagues or the half backs. Hill was much happier in the second half when he went to right back and allowed Jones, the former Tientsin Interporter to take up his rightful position at centre-half.

STRONG HALVES.

With Jones in the pivotal position, the Kowloon intermediates promise to be one of the best middle-lines in the league.

Sonny Bliss refused to allow the cares of captaincy to weigh too heavily, and gave his usual active display. Whitfield who was at centre-half in the opening stages, was rather out of the picture, but when Jones came up there was an all-round improvement in the half back line.

The defence was fairly reliable, although inclined to become spreadeagled when confronted by the fast moving, workmanlike Recreio forwards.

Ford made an excellent debut in goal, fielding the ball well and making two splendid judged clearances in the second half when goals appeared certain.

Jones and Goulthy were an effective pair of backs in the first half, and Jones, who seems capable of holding any position behind the forwards, is likely to prove a decided acquisition to the team.

PROMISING RECREIO.

The Recreio, of whom I was bold enough last year to predict a bright future, gave evidence of justifying that prediction. Their chief disability is lack of weight and inches, especially among the forwards. But as a team they have sound ideas of football and plenty of courage to exploit those ideas.

A sad display of shooting in the second half prevented them from earning a draw. On the general run of the play they deserved to draw.

As a team they impressed more than Kowloon, and especially was this noticeable among the forwards.

They also have a fine pair of backs, with Silva-Netto outstanding.

The Recreio won't win the championship this year, but they are on the right road to producing a team capable of performing this. If the Gosano brothers were in the side the Recreio would be capable of beating any team in the league.

Kowloon won by the odd goal in seven, Elliott netting three and V. White (1) for Kowloon, whilst J. Gomes (2) and Sousa replied for the Recreio.

CLUB IMPROVE

CLEVER DISPLAY BY RESERVES

Encouraging improvement was shown by the Hongkong Fotball Club first string against the Lincolns on Saturday, when they won by seven goals to four.

E. Strange and Bickford on the left wing were outstanding for the Club, and are, I am sure, going to justify the prohecy I made concerning them last week.

Strange scored three fine goals, whilst Albert Howe touched his best form and helped himself to two. Bickford and Fowler wre responsible for the other two.

Forward lines dominated throughout. Ridley, Baldry and Hocquard of the Lincolns were ever dangerous. Baldry scored twice, Hocquard and Cousins one each.

The Club, after recovering from a bad start, were slightly superio., but the effectiveness of the forward line in front of goal was the most welcome feature of the team's display.

FINE RESERVES.

There is no doubt that the team is quickly settling down into a first rate combination. Fisher gave another excellent account of himself, scoring two goals and generally worrying the Lincolns defence.

There was a better balance shown by the whole Club team.

TILDEN AGAIN DEPOSED

CHAMPIONS AGAIN—Picture taking during play in the last league bowls match of the season, when Craigengower beat Civil Service and won the Second Division championship. (Ming Yuen).

CHAMPIONS AGAIN

C.C.C. WIN LAWN BOWLS LEAGUE

FOR SECOND YEAR IN SUCCESSION

Champions for the second year in succession is the achievement of the Craigengower Cricket Club in the second division of the Lawn Bowls League.

They won the championship again on Saturday when they defeated Civil Service in the concluding match of the season 19 shots. They finished ahead on all three rinks and never at any seriously challenged.

The result leaves the Kowloon Bowling Green Club runners up to the Happy Valley team, with the Recreio third and the Civil Service, until a forthnight ago well in the running for honours, fourth.

SCORES.

Scores of Saturday's match and the final league table follows.

Scores as cabled by Reuter were:

Cincinnati	5	11	1
Boston	3	6	3
Cincinnati	6	13	0
(Derringer pitched and blanked out Boston).

There were not many surprised in the Second Division though I expected Millwall to come out of the local Derby with at least equal honours. However, Fulham took both points from the New Cross ground, emphasising the weakness in the Leicesters' attacking department which their new manager, W. McCraken, is setting out to repair.

Luton and Cardiff were the great failures of the Southern Section.

The latter allowed Torquay to net the only goal of the match and take home two valuable points whilst, Luton who thrashed Torquay to the tune of 10-2 a fortnight previously, could only share the spoils on their own ground with Newport. The match ended in tremendous excitement with the ball lost in a heap of players on the Luton goal-line. When the whistle was blown Kean was discovered sitting on the unfortunate ball.

Northampton earned full points against Queen's Park Rangers but

LEADS WORLD'S PROFESSIONALS

Berlin, Sept. 17.

To-day he met W. T. ("Bill") Tilden, former American amateur national champion and holder of the Wimbledon title, in the final round, and won after a four set match.

Tilden, who is 40 years of age, and won his first national title 15 years ago, swept Nuesslein off the court in typical fashion in the first set which he took at 6-1.

But his play subsequently lost its sting, and the German, playing confidently proceeded to win the next three sets, Tilden offering but slight resistance in the final stages of the match.

1-6, 6-4, 7-5, 6-3.

Nuesslein first came to the fore in the professional tennis world in 1930, when he finished runner-up in the German Professional Championship. In the same year he represented Germany in a triangular contest against Great Britain and Holland.

His earliest meeting with Tilden was in 1931, when he played two five-set matches with the American in Hamburg and Berlin, and with Najuch, beat Tilden and Hunter in Paris.

Nuesslein toured America in 1931.—Reuter.

FLOPS IN FOOTBALL FORM

COUPON FANS BEWILDERED BY SERIES OF AMAZING UPSETS

The lion-hearted Spurs did their share on Saturday in hauling down the Arsenal flag when before a record crowd of 57,000 at White Hart Lane, they held last season's League champions to a draw.

Playing with a dash and vigour that almost carried the visitors off their feet in the opening stages of the game, the Spurs raised the jubilation of their supporters to frantic joy when they opened the scoring.

After this, however came a setback, W. Evans the right halfback sustaining a severe injury which left him practically helpless. The famous Highbury forward line then swept down the field and stormed the home goal, Jack's trickery making him an outstanding and dangerous player. It was as a direct result of his initial work that Bowden playing at inside right, notted the equaliser whilst the Spurs were still suffering under the handicap of an injured man.

CHELSEA'S BREAK.

A still-faithful band of supporters at the Chelsea venue saw the London team break a series of despondent failures with a win over the redoubtable Villa. Gibson's trickery in front of the visitors' goal, and a remarkable exhibition of keeping by Woodley were the highlights of the match. Curiously enough Chelsea's day of triumph was achieved in the absence of their forward centre, Gallacher, and Mills who organised coupons.

deputised for his leader was able to demonstrate what he was never able to prove with Gallacher on the field, that he is both efficient and confident in that position.

Stoke continue to show the hallmark of class with which the other promoted club, the Spurs, have been stamped, and their performance in holding Huddersfield to a draw, was meritorious, though not outstanding considering the colourless form of the Cole Valley club.

Leicester created a surprise by taking both points from Liverpool and Wednesday killed their "at home" hoodoo with a convincing win over Middlesbro'.

UNITED VINDICATED.

A big hand for Manchester United!

They were bound to win sometime but why against Brentford far away from home?

MANSFIELD GO AHEAD.

A remarkable sequence of away victories upset expectations in the Northern Section, the surprises being Mansfield, Barnsley, Carlisle, Hartlepools, Barrow, Chester, and Doncaster.

I am glad Mansfield are not going to sink into the slough of despond again and expect them to prove that Saturday's play was no mere flash in the pan.

I thought Walsall and Rotherham could hold their own against the Barrow and Carlisle clubs, but Barnsley are a much improved combination and their decisive defeat of Gateshead is a reminder that they will be a power to reckon with this season.

Chance played noughts and crosses with Scottish football and while Partick suffered another relapse (before St. Johnstone this time), St. Mirren asserted themselves to take the points from their visitors from Falkirk, and Third Lanark held the strong Kilmarnock club to a division of honours. Queen o'South brought off a great coup in travelling to Cowdenbeath to gain both points.

The Airdrie v Hearts match was postponed and the meeting between Celtic and Hamilton was also not played.

CONTRACT BRIDGE

By W. E. McKenney

As I have often explained, a third hand opening may be made with very little strength. However at no time should an original no trump bid be made with anything less than the regular requirements, which are three to three and one-half high-card tricks, tenace positions, no singleton or weak doubleton. Therefore if your partner makes an original no trump bid in third position, you have a right to count him for a very fine hand.

The following hand which was played in the national mixed team-of-four championship at Asbury Park this summer produces not only a bidding problem but also an interesting squeeze.

The Bidding

tricks than the dealer, and while it does values. Therefore I believe it is better to pass with this type of hand. West also passes and North, having a very fine hand, should open the bidding with one no trump. East should pass and now South can make a slam try, by going to three no trump. One North player was then bold enough to bid six no trump. Of course six no trump is easily made if you get the heart opening.

The Play

However, with a club opening, you must develop the squeeze. The trick is won in dummy with the

	♠Q-5-4-3 ♥A-Q-J ♦A-2 ♣A-J-7-6
♠8-6-2 ♥8-6-2 ♦6-5-4 ♣10-9-8-3	NORTH WEST EAST Dealer SOUTH	♠K-J ♥K-10-9-4-3 ♦J-10-7-3 ♣4-2
	♠A-10-9-7 ♥7-5 ♦K-Q-9-8 ♣K-Q-5	18

king and a small spade led to declarer's queen which East wins with the king. East returns another club, dummy wins the trick and continues the club, declarer winning with the jack.

The ace of clubs is then cashed by North. East must discard hearts, as he cannot let go one of his diamonds or the diamond suit will be set up. On the last club, dummy discards a heart. Declarer then returns a small spade and East's jack drops, setting the spade suit in dummy.

Declarer cashes the two spades and East is helplessly squeezed. On the first spade he can discard a heart, but on the second spade he must either bear down to the king of hearts or let go one of his diamonds. His best play, of course, is to drop the ten of hearts, hoping that the declarer will take the finesse, but the declarer goes right up with the ace, capturing the king and successfully making his small slam.

A SCARE AT OBSERVATORY VILLAS YESTERDAY

The roof of No. 6, Observatory Villas, a two-storeyed house in Kowloon, collapsed about 4.30 p.m. yesterday.

The collapse was attended by a terrific crash as tons of masonry fell through to the first floor. Luckily the house was untenanted, having been vacant for six or seven months.

None of the houses on either side suffered any damage.

A shoring has been put up to support the party walls which appear to be in a dangerous condition. The tenants of the adjoining building have been advised to move out.

Observatory Villas, which consists of a block of five two storeyed European houses, are amongst the oldest buildings in the Colony.

House No. 6 was formerly occupied by Mr. M. J. Patell, director of the firm of Apear and Co., Ltd.

CINEMA SCREENINGS

NOTES SUPPLIED BY THE THEATRES

Showing to-day at the King's Theatre is "Soldiers of the King", the Gainsborough picture in which Cicely Courtneidge has her first individual starring role.

That this film will enhance her already popular position with filmgoers can definitely be relied on. She is great! No finer story could have been found for her, and Cicely dances through the whole film, riotously funny in her brilliant burlesque and enchanting in her emotional simplicity.

In one scene Cicely Courtneidge does a burlesque on adagio acrobatics, and anyone who can sit through this without laughing helplessly can assure themselves that they possess no sense of humour.

Edward Everett Horton plays opposite Cicely Courtneidge, and this fine American actor, with his subtle humour and quaint mannerisms, is an excellent foil to the bouyant Cicely. Several well-known variety acts take part, and the result is a fascinating study of a new type of film background.

Cicely Courtneidge plays both mother and daughter in "Soldiers of the King", and her make-up and characterisation is excellent.

"Temple Drake"

"The Story of Temple Drake," William Faulkner's unusual tale of present-day youth, will be shown from Wednesday at the Queen's Theatre with Miriam Hopkins in the title role and Jack LaRue, William Gargan, William Collier, Jr., Irving Pichel and Sir Guy Standing heading the supporting cast.

Miss Hopkins, as the heroine of the film, is a curious mixture of the sedate and the wanton—who refuses an offer of marriage from the young lawyer she loves, and drives off with a drunken college boy in search of more liquor. The ride ends in a crash, and the pair climb from the wreckage to find themselves virtual prisoners of a big-city gangster in a desolate country hideaway.

The gangster ships the boy off to the city, but keeps the girl behind. He cold-bloodedly kills the one man who attempts to protect her, and then drags her off to a tawdry room in the city.

Gargan, the lawyer, is assigned to defend the man falsely accused of the murder, and, in his search for evidence, uncovers the fact that the gangster was on the scene of the crime. He locates him in the city; goes to the room and is horrified to discover the girl with him.

"Cavalcade"

"Cavalcade" is to Congregation Theatre King's Theatre on Wednesday.

This drama whose theme is the effect of world events on the home and family has been hailed as the greatest written in the English language in a score of years. The author, Noel Coward, known for his successes, enjoyed the distinction of having his play run for a year at the Drury Lane Theatre in London.

A staff of experts was sent from Hollywood to see the play and to photograph it for reference. Another large staff was put to work on the research necessary to bring a story that covers the colourful period from 1900 to 1933 to the screen with absolute accuracy of costumes, equipment and historical backgrounds.

More than six months of preparation by a staff that numbered 200 preceded the actual star of production.

REICHSTAG FIRE

PRECAUTIONS TAKEN AT LEIPZIG

Berlin, Sept. 17.

It is officially stated that no aeroplanes will be allowed to fly over Leipzig from September 17 until November 11, in order to prevent any disturbance during the trial of the Reichstag incendiaries.
—Reuter.

Captain Reginald C. Berkeley, distinguished English play right, was brought over from London to adapt the play for the screen. Frank Lloyd, twice winner of the Academy award for the best production of the year, was chosen as director.

Hollywood, New York and London were scoured for the very best actors and actresses fitted by education, training and experience to interpret the 40 principal roles. Three members of the original Drury Lane cast were brought from London to re-enact their parts before the camera, and two other London favourites were also signed for leading roles.

The story of "Cavalcade" is the story of the Marryot family, Jane, Robert, their two sons, Joe and Edward; and their servants, Ellen, Bridges and their daughter, Fanny.

While it is etched on a background of historical events of the last 33 years, the story itself is the principal feature; its joys, loves and tragedies is always uppermost. Its theme is universal.

Diana Wynyard and Clive Brook have the roles of Jane and Robert Marryot, Ursula Jeans plays Fanny Bridges; Herbert Mundin is seen as Bridges, Una O'Conner portrays the role of Ellen; Irene Brown plays Margaret Harris; Merle Tottenham is seen as Annie; Frank Lawton as Joe Marryot, and John Warburton as Edward Marryot.

Other well kown players who have important roles are Margaret Lindsay, Beryl Mercer; Billy Bevan, Frank Atkinson, Mary Forbes and Brandon Hurst. Important child roles are enacted by Dick Henderson, Jr., Douglas Scott, Bonita Granville and Sheila MacGill.

"King of the Jungle"

Miss Stark, who served in a technical capacity during the filming of "King of the Jungle," wild-animal thriller now showing at the Queen's Theatre to record crowds told Buster Crabbe, world champion swimmer featured in the picture; Frances Dee, who plays opposite him, and other members of the cast, one about an elephant with the proverbial elephantine memory. The big animal famed trainer and dealer, and knew and loved his master.

Hagenbeck sold the beast to a circus, and for 14 years never saw it. Then, one day, he visited the circus, which had made the purchase. Long before the elephant saw Hagenbeck, he heard his voice, and set up an exultant trumpeting and stamping. He kept up the din until Hagenbeck entered the ring. Then he jocously wrapped his trunk around him, lifted him up, and deposited him on his head.

WORLD CRISIS

A WAY OUT

By FREDERICK COPE, A.M.I.E.E.

Mr. Cope's striking articles on the world economic crisis which were recently published in the Hongkong Telegraph are now available in pamphlet form.

One of the features, repaying study, is the close similarity between the plan of reform suggested by this local writer, and certain aspects of the Roosevelt recovery programme. The author's ideas are naturally far too advanced for active promotion at the present time, but they are particularly interesting in view of the fact that President Roosevelt, in striking out on a path of his own, has travelled in the same direction.

CRISIS IN CUBA

BUSINESS ALMOST AT A STANDSTILL

Washington, Sept. 17.

United States government circles believe that the crisis may be expected in Cuba within the next twenty-four hours.

Within this time it may be decided whether the San Martin regime can hope to restore law and order.—Reuter.

Washington, Sept. 16.

The aggravation of the Cuban disorders is enhanced by the possibility of the landing of United States troops, as the lives and property of Americans are increasingly jeopardised.

It is reported that infuriated mobs have attacked an American ice factory and a Spanish shoe factory at Manzanillo.

An abortive rising in the province of Pinar del Rio, although stamped out by the Government has increased the general apprehension.

A stronger guard, reinforced by machine guns, has been posted over the 500 officers loyal to ex-President Carlos Cespedes, who is still imprisoned in the Hotel Nacional.

Meanwhile, President Crau San Martine has rejected the proposal of the leaders of the political factions that he should resign in favour of Dr. Cespedes.—Reuter.

Tension Increasing

Havana, Sept. 17.

Business in Cuba is practically at a standstill as, owing to the uncertainty, Americans are refusing to participate in any transaction unless they have a cash advance.

Meanwhile the tension is increasing owing to threats of a general strike, aiming at the overthrow of the governmet.

They have been given an ultimatum that they must surrender by Monday, by which time three hundred must return to their respective commands, while the others will be expelled from the Island.

After a conversation between Mr. Sumner Welles, the U.S. Ambassador to Cuba, and the Committee of the Student Directorate, a member of the Committee stated that Mr. Welles declared that the United States would not intervene in Cuba.

Marines might be landed, however, if the lives or property of Americans were endangered.—Reuter.

MANCHUKUO ERA

SHANHAIKUAN'S SECOND ANNIVERSARY

Shanhaikuan, Sept. 15.

The entire population turned out this morning to witness an important ceremony at the residence of General Hirata, in commemoration of the anniversary of the recognition of Manchukuo by the Japanese Government.

The Manchukuo flag was first hoisted, and this was followed by the unveiling of a photo of Pu Yi. Later over 200 guests took luncheon in General Hirata's residence. Speeches were made and toasts given to the Emperor of Japan, Pu Yi and the President of the Republic of China.

KALGAN TENSION

JAPANESE THREAT TO DESTROY CITY

Peking, Sept. 15.

General Sung Cheh-yuan is hurrying back from Tientsin to-night to confer with General Ho Ying-ching concerning the situation in Charhar, created by the Japanese threat of drastic action if the Chinese troops do not withdraw from Kuyuan.

Chinese circles are of the opinion that the Japanese warning was prompted by a fear that the division of General Sung's troops under the Command of General Chao Teng-yu, which recently occupied Kuyuan, may continue their advance on Dolonor, which city is at present held by Manchukuo troops.

It is reported that the local military authorities have already wired to General Chao, ordering him to halt his advance.

Japanese Warning.

Chinese despatches from Kalgan last week told of a threat by Japanese to destroy that city by air attacks unless certain terms were agreed to and complied with immediately.

According to a Kalgan message to the Shih Chieh Wan Po, the Japanese planes appeared over the city and scattered leaflets which contained a warning signed by the head of the Japanese military mission in Jehol City.

The warning complained of an alleged violation of the Tangku Armistice by the troops of General Sung Cheh-yuan in occupying Kuyuan and added that unless these troops evacuated the city to the westward of the armistice line, the Japanese would not only hold General Sung Cheh-yuan responsible for the violation of the armistice, but would bomb and destroy Kalgan.—Reuter.

PERSIAN APOLOGY

INSULT TO UNION JACK

London, Sept. 16.

An answer has now been received from the Persian Government regarding the incident at Basidu Kishm Island, in the Persian Gulf where recently some Persian naval officers landed and pulled down the Union Jack.

Basidu has been in British occupation for 100 years, and in response to the protest of the British Government, an assurance has been given by the Persian Government to the British representative in Teheran that the action of the officers in question was quite unauthorised.

Regrets at their behaviour have been expressed, and the Union Jack has been replaced in position by a unit of the British Navy.

A visit is at present being paid to Friendly Sheiks of the Persian Coast of the Mediterranean by Flotilla of the British Fleet.

FRENCH OPINION HARDENING

ARMAMENT PERIL

LITTLE LIKELIHOOD OF CONCESSIONS

CAPTAIN EDEN'S VISIT

Paris, Sept. 18.

Britain's attempt to persuade France to "grant a little disarmament on account as a gesture towards Germany," is the description applied by political writers to the Anglo-French disarmament conversations which are opening to-day.

In the hope of arriving at a basis for a common disarmament policy, before taking the road back to Geneva, the British Under-Secretary for Foreign Affairs, Captain Anthony Eden, who has borne the burden of the attempt to steer the British Plan through the Disarmament Conference, arrives in Paris to-day and will proceed at once to the Quai D'Orsay for an interview with M. Daladier.

TWO DAYS.

The talks are expected to last for two days and there is a possibility that Captain Eden will leave for Rome for similar talks, provided the Paris conversations produce a satisfactory result.

A cordial reception awaits Captain Eden in Paris but although the talks are regarded as vital, because Geneva next month must see either the success of the Disarmament Conference or a revival of a race in armaments, it is impossible to hide the fact that French opinion is hardening, especially following Baron von Neurath's premise that the sole alternative to the collapse of disarmament efforts is equality of armaments.

FRENCH DOCTRINE.

The fundamentals of the French doctrine, from which no important departure is to be expected, are:

(1) no re-armament of Germany;

(2) no disarmament in France for a period of five years in order that France may make sure that Germany is keeping faith;

(3) universal international control of armaments.

BRITAIN'S HOPES.

It is understood that Britain is contriving that France shall promise to disarm to Germany's level at the end of the period.—Reuter.

If the failure of the last disarmament conference, pictured below in session at Geneva, is not to be duplicated by the next conference, much credit will go to Mr. Arthur Henderson (above), who is to make another visit to the capitals in an effort to achieve advance accord among European statesmen.

GENERAL O'DUFFY GIVES WARNING

MR. DE VALERA'S ARRANGEMENT WITH LABOUR PARTY

DEAN OF CASHEL'S LETTER

London, Sept. 18.

An imposing parade of the Blue Shirts in "uniform" was held to-day at Thurles, where the campaign of the new United Ireland Party was commenced.

General O'Duffy, Mr. Cosgrave, Mr. Dermot and Mr. Dillon were on the platform at the opening.

General O'Duffy in a fiery speech warned Mr. de Valera that if he attempted by the preversion of the law or by a trick to get rid of a law-abiding movement because it was a political danger to his party, he would bring the government to a sharp and speedy end.

A letter was read from the Dean of Cashel saying that he was heart and soul with the new party, but concluding:

"May God save Ireland. He alone can."

LABOUR'S PRICE.

Meanwhile, the Labour leader, Mr. Norton, in a speech at Kildare, revealed that the Government had guaranteed, in return for Labour support, to include in the next budget a scheme for widows and orphans' pensions and an extension of the dole to unemployed.

Labour will be consulted in all projected legislation.

DE VALERA SPEECH.

Two hundred horsemen provided a striking spectacle in a procession welcoming Mr. De Valera to a Macroom meeting which was held in a downpour of rain.

Mr. de Valera said he had no special hatred of England, but he hated tyranny. There was no fear of a Government defeat, he said, while they worked with the Labour Party.—Reuter.

WEEK-END TOLL OF THE ROAD

YOUNG PERSONS IN ACCIDENTS

Through being knocked down by a taxi in Wellington Street, yesterday, Chan Tong-kau, aged 10, is now lying at the Government Civil Hospital in a critical condition from head injuries.

Another lad, Wong Shing-kat, aged 9, was injured also by a taxi in Taihang Road, near the Chinese Recreation Club, and was taken to the Hospital.

Minor injuries were caused to Ng Chung-ying, a girl aged 6, through being knocked down by a cyclist in Laichikok Road. She was admitted to the Kowloon Hospital.

Suffering from facial injuries caused when the car in which he was travelling came into collision with another car on the Taipo Road, [illegible] boy, P. Jorge, was admitted to the Kowloon Hospital yesterday.

TROUBLE THOUGHT POSSIBLE

MUKDEN SEIZURE ANNIVERSARY

Nanking, Sept. 18.

The authorities in Shanghai and Nanking are keeping a close watch for possible disturbances by students in connexion with the second anniversary of the Japanese occupation of Mukden.

The appearance of anti-Japanese slogans and the arrangement of the many demonstrations and meetings show that public opinion still feels keenly animus against Japan in consequence of the Manchuria adventure.

WORLD SWIMMING RECORDS

New Times for 800 and 1,000 Metres

Los Angeles, Sept. 17.

Jack Medica, who is only eighteen years of age, to-day established new world's free style swimming records for the eight hundred metres, which he swam in 10 mins. 13 6/10ths seconds, and the thousand metres for which his time was 12 mins. 43 8/10ths.—Reuter.

NEW TRACK RECORD

LUIGI BECCALI'S FEAT

J. E. LOVELOCK FAILS

Milan, Sept. 17.

The feature of the athletic contest between Great Britain and Italy, which was won by Italy by 83 points to 62, and by nine events to five, was the breaking of the world's fifteen hundred metres record.

This brilliant achievement was credited to Luigi Beccali, Italy's Olympic champion, who clocked 3 mins. 49 seconds, dead, beating the record by one-fifth of a second.

The old record of 3 mins. 49 1/5th seconds was established by Jules Ladoumegue (France), a crack runner who was subsequently deprived of his amateur status.

While Luigi Beccali was beating the record, an attempt to do so was being made in Paris by J.E. Lovelock, who was responsible for a sensational world's mile record a month or two ago.

He failed to-day, his time being 3 mins. 52 4/5ths. Chief reason for his failure was lack of opposition.—Reuter.

NANKING PUBLIC BONFIRE

MUKDEN INCIDENT ANNIVERSARY

Nanking, Sept. 18.

The population of the capital is turning out this morning to witness a huge bonfire of Japanese goods, confiscated in the past ten months or so, at the Public Recreation Ground in commemoration of the Anniversary of the "Mukden Incident."

All classes are participating in a mass meeting to be held at the same time, at which speeches will be given in turn by Kuomintang leaders and poular delegates.—Central News Agency.

JAPANESE RELEASED BY SOVIET

Harbin, Sept. 18.

Mr. Kameyama, the Japanese who was arrested by Soviet frontier guards on September 10th, was released yesterday and reached Pogranitchnaya at 5 p.m.

Mr. Kameyama, who is employed by the Manchukuo Customs at Suifenho, was walking in the hills east of Pogranitchnaya at the time of his arrest, but it has not been established whether it was in Manchukuo or Soviet territory when captured.—Reuter.

WEEVIL PEST IN GODOWNS

SANITARY DEPARTMENT ACTIVITY

ALARMING LOCAL DISCOVERY

(SPECIAL TO THE "TELEGRAPH").

Some alarm has been caused in official circles and among flour importers by the discovery that large stocks of flour held in various godowns in the Colony have become seriously affected by weevils, so much so, that the Government have been compelled to take drastic action, having condemned a considerable number of bags (in one instance said to be 1,000) as unfit for human consumption.

It is understood that the present stocks held in the Colony total approximately 900,000 bags, but what proportion of this is affected is not yet known. Many godowns have yet to be examined. Of those already inspected, some are "alive" with weevils. In others, few have been found.

Dealers point out that some of the stocks have been held as long as eighteen months, and that it is on account of this, coupled with the unusually dry and hot summer, that the weevil pest has spread with such alarming rapidity.

It is learned that as a result of inspections carried out by the Health Department some 50 tons of flour has been condemned and dumped into the sea.

WAR DECLARED ON INSECTS.

Enquiries by the Telegraph this morning confirmed the reports and the Medical Officer of Health, Dr. G. W. Pope, informed us that the Government was well aware of the existence of the pest and everything possible was being done.

Visits of inspection have been carried out and that as a result some fifty tons of wheat has already been destroyed.

The Government Analyst has been called in and ways and means are being considered for disposing of the insect, if possible, without destroying the flour.

STARTLING RESULTS.

The discovery of the pest was made towards the end of last week following the inspection of a suspected premises.

The appearance of the weevil in the Colony has caused no small alarm.

Since last week a number of godowns containing flour have been thoroughly examined with startling results. In practically every building visited traces were apparent.

In some the flour was a maze of the insects while in other places they were so few that they were difficult to find.

OLD FLOUR.

We understand that the most seriously affected godowns are those housing flour which has been in them for almost two years.

It is believed that before the world depression came and the price of flour fell local merchants laid in large quantities of the commodity in the hope that prices would rise.

As the depression continued the prices fell still lower and they were left with tons of flour which they could not dispose of. It is in this flour that the pest is thriving.

SERIOUS OUTLOOK.

As a result of the discovery it is understood that thousands of bags will have to be destroyed. This must naturally spell ruin to a number of firms whose capital is largely bound up in the flour which is at present in storage [illegible] Everything possible is being done by the Government to save such a catastrophe. It is hoped that the Government Analyst can find a way to kill off the insects without destroying the flour.

SPECIES OF BEETLE.

Weevil is a term applied commonly to group of beetles which feed upon plants. They are characterised by the possession of a distinct beak or snout which is sometimes very long. The larvae are white fleshy grubs with wrinkled skins and bent bodies and usually have no legs. These and the beetles of many species cause extensive damage to cultivated plants while many cause much loss by their destruction of grain.

Annual imports of flour into the Colony total about 8,000,000 bags, of which about 7,000,000 are re-exported.

FRONT DOOR AT BACK

Mexico City, Sept. 17.

One of the most extraordinary of hurricane "freak" results is reported as the result of another terrific and disastrous gale which swept the Mexican coast to-day.

A church at Oriental was blown completely round as if on an axis, and the back door is now at the front!

At least ninety-one persons are known to have been killed by the hurricane, which wrecked buildings in the coast towns, hundreds being injured by collapses.

EMPRESS LINER MISHAP

Leak Sprung Through Plate Cracking

The Telegraph learns from official sources that the return of the "Empress of Canada" to Yokohama was not due to engine trouble.

The ship sprung a leak, owing to a plate near the keel cracking, and was returning to Yokohama to have this plate replaced before proceeding on her voyage. She was due in Yokohama yesterday evening, and is expected to resume her voyage in a few days.

EMPRESS LINER IN A GALE

SIX OF SEAMEN INJURED

SPRINGS LEAK

Tokyo, Sept. 18.

It was revealed on the return of the Empress of Canada to Yokohama to-day that the liner had run into a violent storm when about five hundred miles out at sea.

She developed a serious leak after a severe buffeting, during which six seamen were injured.

A survey which has been carried out which indicates that dry-docking will probably be necessary, in which case temporary repairs will be effected in Yokohama and the Empress will then have to be taken to Kobe for the renewal of her plate.

REPULSE BAY ROAD MISHAP

POLICE OFFICER'S CONDITION

Information from the Government Civil Hospital to-day concerning Police Sergeant Delahunty, who was seriously injured yesterday on the Repulse Bay Road when he collided with a motor-car while driving a motor-cycle, is to the effect that he is progressing as well as can be expected. It is hoped that the amputation of his right leg may not be necessary.

Miss Moorsin who was riding pillion, is suffering from shock and abrasions, but is otherwise little the worse for the experience.

Children Grow Timid When Strangers Distrust Them

By Olive Roberts Barton

Frank, aged five, was playing De Soto—his tour of exploration being limited to the block in which he lived instead of the Mississippi Valley.

He saw a big white dog cross the block of grass in front of a house and trot around to the back yard. Frank crossed the grass and followed the dog.

The Millers were on the porch. "Hey there, boy, keep off the grass. What are you doing here?" boomed Mr. Miller's voice from behind the vine.

Ordered Away

Frank stopped like a startled deer, then padded back to the pavement as fast as he could go. His eyes were big. Nobody had ordered the dog away. But then, he was a boy!

He went along for a couple of houses and sat down on some steps. It was nearly bedtime and he was tired.

Two rose bushes grew on either side of the top step. He crawled over to one and smelled the single big red rose that was out.

A girl on a bicycle rode up to the steps and dismounted. "Don't touch that rose," she said sharply. "Run along home. If I hadn't come you would have pulled it, wouldn't you."

Frank obeyed. At least he left the steps. He stood looking up and down the street. He didn't want to go home. That meant bed. He proceeded with his cruising.

In "Wrong" Again

A green car stood beside the curb. It looked like Uncle Mack's car but he knew it wasn't. However, he sat down on the running board and, picking up some little twigs, laid them beside him. He made a square and big "A" and an "M."

"Scram!" yelled a young man slamming a screen door. "Beat it, kid. But clean off that mess first. Of all the impudence!"

Frank brushed off the twigs and walked away backwards, his finger in his mouth, big eyes staring at this new Nemesis.

Finally he turned and ran.

Before he got home again, however, he had been told by a cross old man who had to step sideways to get out of his road to "watch where he was going," had been ordered away from a parked baby carriage into which he was peeping, and had had a child's wagon jerked from under him by an impatient mother who accused him of being about to steal it.

Mother's Affection

At last he started home. He hadn't gone far when he heard his mother's anxious voice calling "Frankie!" over and over.

"Goodness but I was worried!" she cried. You mustn't wander away, dear. Someone might want a nice little boy and take you away."

"Do people like boys?" asked Frank.

"Like them!" She gave him a big hug and cuddled him on her lap. "Like them. I should say so. That's what little boys are for, to make people happy. There, dear," she slid him down. "Get it." Mrs. Simpson next door was holding out a bouquet.

Frank went over slowly, took the bouquet, and ran.

"Thank you," called his mother. Then, "You mustn't be so scary, dear. They like little boys."

Frank yawned. If he had been ten years older he would have answered that with the well-known Bronx cheer.

A CINEMA FAVOURITE DONE UP BROWN

Sally Eilers

Organdie is an ideal fabric for summer evening dresses and plaids are chic! You can't go wrong if you wear either one, or both.

Sally Eilers combines these two fashion highlights and wears a brown organdie dance frock, plaided in yellow and white with a fine stripe of scarlet.

The sleeves are a series of ruffles and the skirt falls from a tight yoke into the fullness which also spells smartness this season. Sally wears brown satin sandals with this costume.

GLORIFYING YOURSELF

By Alicia Hart

You'll see your beauty eye to eye if you invest in some of the newest eye cosmetics.

A famous French manufacturer of cosmetics rises up to assert that American women treat their eyes with not enough consideration. He says that they make bigger mistakes when they choose eye cosmetics than they do choosing all other cosmetics put together.

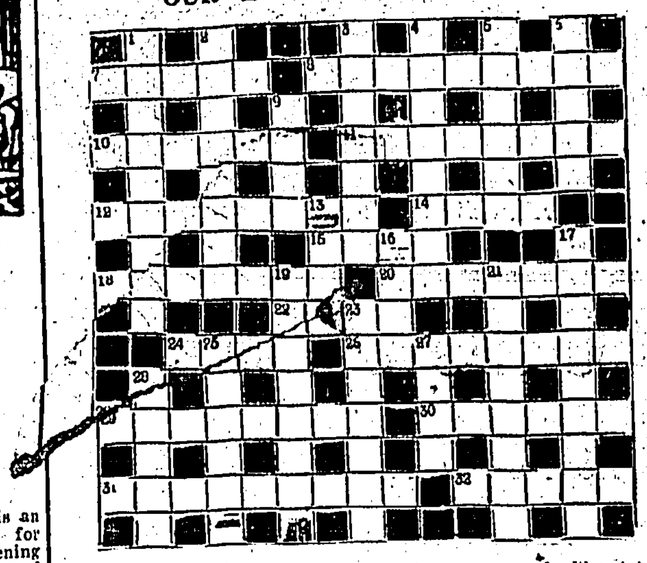

In the first place, your eyes are the most important part of your face. Portrait painters and artists of all time have said that a woman with beautiful eyes could be handsome even if the rest of her features were not so good looking.

In view of that, you should begin at once to take proper care of your eyes and use only cosmetics which are suited to them.

Eye shadow is exactly what the name implies! You don't use it merely to add a touch of green, blue, brown or black to your face. Eye shadow should be the shade of the natural colour of the shadow over your eyes. Get a hand mirror and study the shade of the skin above your eyes. Your eye shadow should match it exactly. If it is a greyish brown colour, (that's the most common shade of women's eyelids), don't get blue or plain brown eyeshadow. Get one which is greyish brown! And use it sparingly!

Don't blend eyeshadow out on your cheeks unless the natural shadow extends that far. Always stick to the natural. You can't make over your face and its shadows anyway. The best you can do is to make the natural shadows show up to advantage.

For the LOVE of EVE by Lucy Walling

CHAPTER XXIV

The announcement of Marya's marriage plans came as a distinct shock to Eve. The girls had worked together for several years. Marya was blessed with a tranquil disposition that often served as oil on the troubled waters of office trials.

For a while Marya had been watching sales and making purchases for her hope chest, for it was a tradition among Marya's people that a bride should go to her bridegroom with a complete equipment of linens, cooking utensils and silver. Marya's parents also purchased her dining room furniture as a wedding gift. An uncle invited her to choose a living room suite as his gift. Marya was to take to her new home the bedroom furnishings that had been hers since her 21st birthday. Thus the new home would be practically equipped.

Marya and Ray had spent many Sundays driving about the city, stopping now and then to look at houses in new allotments. Marya had always maintained that she wanted a little gray bungalow when she married but a red brick house completely captured her fancy. There was a beamed ceiling in the story-and-a-half living room. The dining room was elevated a trifle with a wrought iron bannister beside its three steps. In one bedroom the walls were panelled with an English garden scene and here she planned to place her mahogany bed, using a light green spread and draperies. In the other bedroom gay nasturtiums trailed over the walls. This room was to have furniture enamelled green.

Colourful floral wall paper adorned the breakfast room. The recreation room in the basement appealed to Ray. There was a nursery upstairs with cunning Mother Goose figures on the wall and light pink woodwork and beside it was another well-lighted room which would serve as Marya's studio.

It really seemed to be an ideal home. For Ray's parents it was the culmination of years of thrift to know that their son could purchase such a house. Ever since he had received his first earnings Ray's father and mother had coached him to prepare for a future home of his own. Hence, though only in the middle twenties, Ray and Marya were to start married life with no debts except the monthly payments arranged to complete the purchase of their home.

Marya and Ray had asked Eve and Dick to drive out to see the house before the final papers were signed. Dick declared it to be well built and, according to the prevailing market, a good buy. Eve thought the house was perfect and she came back to the apartment with a wistful longing for such a home of her own.

"Never mind, sweetheart!" Dick told her. "You'll probably get everything you want some day but you can't expect it all at once."

"Yes, and now I have my career," Eve answered, instantly optimistic. "Lots of women who spend their days with dustmops and ironing boards would be glad to exchange them for a chance at a job like mine. Besides they say everything comes to him who waits."

And so Eve helped Marya shop during their noon hours. Arlene never accompanied them on these shopping trips.

"Honestly," Arlene confided to Eve, "I can't work up much excitement over household doowhackets. I'll probably wait until I'm 100 yards the other side of the altar and then go on a buying spree! The advantage of that will be that I'll have the very last word in floor-waxers and washlines, I suppose!"

The week before Easter Marya met Ray daily for luncheon. Eve and Arlene attended Lenten services each noon. On Good Friday they met Mr. Bixby coming from the church and Eve's heart warmed toward the white-haired old man as he bowed to them with dignity.

"The old lamb!" said Arlene. "To think I usually tremble in my boots when he enters the office!"

Saturday Marya spent her last day at the store. She had worked industriously to prepare advance drawings so that the advertising office could run smoothly for a week in case they found no one to take her place immediately.

Marya's eyes were misty when she finally cleared her desk and packed her personal belongings. Several girls from other departments came in to bid her goodbye and Barnes called her into his private office for a brief session. Then it was closing time and Marya made a last survey of the familiar room. "Oh, Eve!" she cried, "I'm going to miss you dreadfully! What shall I do without this office?" Eve put firm arms about Marya and led her to the locker room.

* * *

After lunch Sunday, Eve and Dick joined the Easter parade on the avenue. The sun shone brightly and here and there before a pretentious home yellow and lavender crocuses raised their heads from the green grass. They saw Mona Allen wearing a new black coat, lavishly trimmed with black fox. Framing her face was the hat with the halo of white violets which Eve had wanted to buy.

Eve and Dick ate a late dinner and then strolled through the park to the Art Museum where they enjoyed the organ recital.

Marya's wedding took place next day. Eve felt that she would never forget the lovely picture Marya made as she came down the aisle of the church on the arm of her white-haired father. The organ was sending forth the strains of the bridal chorus from "Lohengrin." Eve brushed her eyes with a wisp of lace handerchief while Arlene let the tears roll frankly down her cheeks.

Marya wore a severely simple white satin frock with long tight sleeves and a long train. Her veil was arranged cap fashion above her broad white forehead. She carried a sheaf of calla lilies. The altar was banked with Easter lilies, and seven-branch candelabra lighted the path of the bride. Marya had but two attendants—fair-haired cousins gowned in pink and blue lace frocks.

After the ceremony there was a reception. Later that evening Marya changed into a dove gray travelling costume trimmed with fluffy gray fox. And before anyone was aware of it she and Ray had slipped away from the others and fled in a taxi to the Union Station where they boarded a train for New York.

Marya's wedding was the sort Eve had once planned for herself. She knew she would always remember that wedding as one of the loveliest she had attended. She knew too, that she would miss Marya from the office but that their friendship was the sort that would last.

Later as Eve and Dick went up the steps of Mrs. Brooks' house they heard their telephone ringing. "Wonder if something is wrong on the job," Dick said as he fitted the key into the lock.

Eve was amazed to hear that the call was for her. "This is the Times advertising department," came the voice over the wire. "We are calling about the Bixby advertisement for to-morrow. Mr. Barnes said he left the copy with you this afternoon. We've been trying to get you all evening. Our deadline is 10:15, and it's nearly that now. What shall we do?"

Eve's knees seemed to go limp. "How dreadful!" she exclaimed. "I left the copy in an envelope on my desk addressed to The Times. Are you sure it wasn't there?"

"The boy said he and Barnes looked all over for it and then decided you must have taken it with you," the voice answered.

"Heavens! I'll have to try to get into the office and then call you back from there!" Eve answered.

"Dick, Dick!" she cried. "We've got to go to the store right away to see if I can find the copy for to-morrow's Times. Oh, this is terrible! There's a special sale scheduled and if that ad isn't in the morning paper I'll lose my job! We've got to hurry—the deadline is at 10:15 and there isn't a minute to spare!"

Dick got out the car and they drove without a word until he made an abrupt stop at the side entrance to Bixby's. To Eve it seemed forever before the night watchman arrived in answer to her frantic summons.

FATAL AIR CRASH

London, Sept. 16.

Captain Pennington, an R.A.F. airman with a distinguished war record, received fatal injuries when a ten seater de Havilland "Dragon" aeroplane which he was piloting crashed near Doncaster last evening.

The aeroplane was taking off when it crashed into a hedge, the under part of the machine being torn away. The machine was completely wrecked.

There were six passengers in the machine but they either entirely escaped or were only slightly injured. All had been attending the Doncaster Race meeting.

The passengers included Gordon Richards, the champion jockey, who yesterday won five out of six races in which he rode.

Richards has ridden 184 winners this season. As the flat racing season closes in November, he still has a chance of beating the record of Fred Archer, who in the 1885 season, rode 246 winners.—British Wireless.

Important Captives.

Nanking, Sept. 16.

Among the fifty Communists arrested at Chengtu were Lin Wan-hsuan and Tsen Shao-chow, who returned to China in 1931 to direct Communist activities after many years spent in Soviet Russia, and Lo Chang-an, a member of the "Szechuan Provincial Soviet."

Information received in Nanking states that the Red organization in Szechuan has suffered a heavy blow through the arrests. It is stated that forty Communists of lesser importance have renounced their faith and have volunteered to assist in the anti-Red campaign.

It is also said that a reapprochment has been effected between Liu Hsiang and Liu Wen-hui, following the latter's offer to join the forces operating against the Communists.—Reuter.

You will lose your teeth! through Neglect

PYORRHEA'S attack is invisible

THE ugly mouth disease, Pyorrhea, can lurk for 10 years, unnoticed. It is an invisible enemy which attacks the gums. But only later makes itself known in many horrible ways. Its first warning may be your tooth brush—just a bit pink from bleeding gums. Then the gums get soft, spongy, tender. Next the teeth loosen in their sockets and what may happen then, worst of all, the teeth drop out, or have to be pulled out!

The price you pay for neglect, is the dreaded disease, pyorrhea, and all of its attending ills.

Loss of teeth often leads to general bad health and loss of vitality. Your healthy smile disappears and with it, popularity and admiration . . . and your friends!

You don't have to risk this! Start now. Save your teeth. Use Forhan's for the Gums. More than an ordinary tooth paste, it prevents pyorrhea, it will keep your gums healthy, your teeth beautifully white, and sound. Remember, there is no substitute for fine, healthy teeth and the smile of youth and no finer dentifrice than Forhan's for the Gums.

CHINA EMPORIUM

THOUSANDS TEEND THE OPENING CEREMONY

Thousands packed the China Emporium, Hongkong's, newest departmental store, in Queen's Road Central, when it opened its doors for the first time for business on Saturday. A dense mass of humanity struggled through from floor to floor up to Chinese tea-garden and amusements resort on the roof of the six-storeyed building, and then down again, and so it continued for the greater part of the day, as Hongkong satisfied its curiosity and speculated on the values of the hundred-and-one lines of goods carried by the modern departmental shop.

To mark the important event, the Directors and management held a reception in the European cafe on the fourth floor. The official guests, including the Hon. Sir Henry Pollock and the Hon. Mr. R. H. Kotewall, were received by Hon. Sir Shou-son Chow, Chairman of the Board of Directors. This was followed by a number of addresses, the ceremony concluding with the presentation to the Chairman by Mr. W. C. Felshaw, on behalf of the architects, Messrs. Little, Adams and Wood, of a silver cigarette box, suitably inscribed.

Chairman's Speech.

Sir Shou-son Chow, welcoming the guests, said:—As you all know, there are already several other departmental stores in different parts of the Colony, but the locality we have chosen is, we think, one that serves a large section of the community and is particularly convenient to residents of the Middle Level and the central part of the City.

It is not our intention to enter into competition with other departmental stores, as we feel that Hongkong is, after all, not so small a place as not to admit of the establishment of another emporium such as ours. I, for one, feel that in spite of the general depression, there is still ample scope in the Colony for the promotion of legitimate business enterprises.

It is true that Hongkong, like the rest of the world, has not escaped the depression, but we have no reason to be pessimistic. World economic problems will find a solution sooner or later, and it is only a question of time when Hongkong will regain its former prosperity.

Fine Building.

We have seen many imposing buildings erected in the Colony in recent years. Our is a combination of Chinese and Western architecture, designed and supervised by Messrs. Little, Adams and Wood to whom my fellow-Directors and I wish to tender thanks and congratulation on the successful completion on their difficult task.

We have this day launched a new enterprise—an entirely new business in a new building, stocked with new goods, run by a new staff. As everything is new to us, I fear that, at the beginning, we may not be able to come up to your expectation, and I therefore crave your indulgence, which I feel we shall have.

It only remains for me to assure the public of our best services in every respect, and our earnest endeavours to live up to our motto, which is "Efficiency and Courtesy."

Sir Henry's Speech.

Replying on behalf of the guests, Hon. Sir Henry Pollock said:—I have been asked by my Honourable friend, Sir Shou-son Chow, the Chairman of the Board of Directors, to say a few words upon the occasion of the opening of this great emporium.

There can be no doubt, from the inspection which I have made of these premises, that we have here a very up-to-date concern, which bears every promise of a very successful future.

Perhaps you will kindly permit me to refer to a matter which I naturally have very much at heart.

Speaking as a Briton and as an old resident in this British Colony where Chinese and British interests are so closely bound up together, I would venture to urge the Directors of this Company to deal as largely as possible in British and in British Empire goods.

In support of this appeal of mine, I would urge the two following considerations: firstly, that British goods have a deservedly great reputation throughout the world for their excellent quality and finish; and secondly that, whilst many other international exchanges at this time of world crisis have been rocketing up and down, the rate of exchange between our local dollar and the pound sterling has remained remarkably stable by comparison.

Ladies and gentlemen, I will not detain you longer, but will ask you now to join with me in drinking to the long and continuous success and prosperity of this Emporium.

Faith in Colony.

Speaking in Chinese, Hon. Mr. Kotewall, who offered congratulations on behalf of the Chinese guests, said that the Founders and Directors, by establishing this additional emporium at a time when the Colony's trade was not as good as it should be, had demonstrated in a very concrete manner their faith in the Colony. It was an example which might well be copied by others who have capital to invest in commercial undertakings in Hongkong.

He heartily wished the Company the success which the Directors had earned by their courage and enterprise.

The Directors of the Company are the Hon. Sir Shou Son Chow, (Chairman), Messrs. Kan Tong Po, Fung Fook Tin, Chan Lim Pak, Wong Kwok Shuen, Li Tse Fong, Pun Hui Cho, Chow Chi Nam, P. K. Kwok, Chan Tse Kei, and the late Mr. Chau Yue Tong; with Mr. Chan Harr as general manager.

POLITICAL UNITY

London, Sept. 17.

Addressing an audience of 20,000 people in Cork, Mr. de Valera announced that the Government and the Labour Party had agreed on all main issues of policy that were likely to arise during the lifetime of the present Dail. Hence, there would be no elections in the near future.

In his first public reference to the new United Ireland Party, Mr. de Valera described the National Guard as a military wing of the new party.

He added that the government would not permit any military movement to develop under cover of party politics.

De Valera did not spare his own supporters when he condemned the raids on shops and premises selling British beer and similar "shameful incidents."

He warned the authors of the raids that they were encouraging the British and discouraging every sane and patriotic Irishman.—Reuter.

London, Sept. 16.

Humanitarian, social reformer, and a great lover of animals, Mr. Ernest Bell, M.A., head of G. Bell and Sons, Ltd., has died at the age of 82.

Whilst chairman of the great publishing company which bears his name, he managed to find time for many other interests. He was President of the Vegetarian Society, chairman of the Anti-Vivisection Society, treasurer of the National Council of Animals' Welfare, and a member of the Pit Ponies' Protection Society.

Born in 1851, he was a son of the famous George Bell whose publishing career he followed with such success.

In 1893 he married Marie A. von Tavsen.

Mr. Bell was editor of the "All England Series of Athletic Sports" and published "Fair Treatment for Animals," "Bell's Joy-book," and a number of pamphlets on humanitarian subjects.

Sir Edmund Noot-Bower

The death is announced of Sl Edmund Ernest Nott-Bower, K.C.B. —Our Own Correspondent.

Sir Edmund Nott-Bower was Assistant Secretary to the Board of Inland Revenue from 1895 to 1902, becoming Commissioner, Deputy Chairman and Chairman by successive stages. He held his last office as Chairman throughout the Great War. The son of a Doctor of Civil Law, Sir Edmund was a Barrister himself and served as a Justice of the Peace for Surrey.

He married Louisa, daughter of Capt. J. C. Yorke, of Gwernant, Cardiganshire, and leaves a son and a daughter.

COAL CODE SIGNED BY OPERATORS

Philadelphia, Sept. 17.

The city's food supply is threatened seriously by one of the most complete general strikes in the history of the state. More than 5,000 lorry drivers, carriers of the city's provisions, are affected by the "lock-out" and are holding up by their idleness G$100,000 worth of foodstuffs, half of which are perishable.—Reuter.

Operators Sign.

Washington, Sept. 17.

The Coal Code has been signed by the operators.

General Hugh Johnson: the head of the National Recovery Administration, has been wrestling for weeks with the problem of a bituminious Coal Code, and last week threatened to recommend to the President that action be taken against the recalcitrant group.—Reuter.

Higher Prices.

Washington, Sept. 17.

Wholesale commodity prices were one per cent. higher during August than in July, according to the U. S. Labour Department, but the index figure is only 69.5, compared with 100 in 1926, which means a big decline on average since that time.—Reuter.

BANK CONTROL

A rather startling interpretation is now being given to the announcement at the end of last week that the Reconstruction Finance Corporation is proposing to lend $1,000,000,000 to sound American banks. The banks are expected to re-lend the money at a slightly higher interest rate, the step being designed ostensibly to encourage financial houses to lend more freely to business and to industry and thus promote the recovery programme. It is nevertheless also being interpreted as a revolutionary movement designed to give the government virtual control of the banking system. The loan is reported as likely to be "floated" by the purchase of $1,000,000,000 worth of stock in banks throughout the country, thus giving, the government 25 per cent. of the ownership of bank capital. This huge government holding of bank shares would be sufficient to give virtual control of banking activities. The administration has disclaimed any intention of operating the banks, and asserts it is only interested in making the banks foolproof.

It is believed however that if the plan now under consideration in high government councils is adopted, it must be recognized as one of the most revolutionary steps in what is already being described as the greatest economic revolution ever known, although its fate is still uncertain. The object would be to gain control of banking policy, and the suggestion, whether true or not, lends added interest to the proposals of the British Labour Party outlined last week. The fact is that none but bankers, and not all of them, defend the existing banking system. It works too conspicuously in the financial interests of the few. It provides too frugally for the welfare of the whole industrial community. Production may, and does, languish. The dividends of the Banks may, and do, flourish. Industry cuts wages and salaries, sacks men, silences its machines. The Big Five in Britain pay from 14 to 18 per cent. in dividends. Leaders of industry, politicians, newspapers and economists express dissatisfaction. But not everyone agrees about the precise shapes which reform should take. For want of that agreement reform lags.

NOTES OF THE DAY

FREE STATE POLITICS

There are two ways of looking at Mr. de Valera's announcement in Cork indicating that an early Free State election has been indefinitely postponed. It momentarily damps the hopes of the United Ireland Party without being altogether discouraging. Mr. de Valera has found it expedient to come to terms with the Labour Party, permitting the existing Government to survive, a step which can readily and probably correctly be interpreted to mean that the political atmosphere today is anything but strikingly propitious for the Fianna Fail. We have to credit Mr. de Valera with skill as a tactician. His rush election which took the opposition by surprise last year was a masterly stroke which reaped its due reward. To-day he dare not risk an appeal to the country; he finds himself instead compelled to appeal to his supporters to discover their common-sense, to refrain from the acts of terrorism which are losing him erstwhile allies on all sides.

* * *

I.R.A. CONTROL

If there were a chance of the Irish Republican Army and of Dublin's hooligan gangs responding to the appeal, Mr. de Valera might still hope for the future. But the I.R.A. has become too accustomed to dictate to be able to accept meekly any dictation. Postponing the election merely makes it more certain that when the mandate of the country is finally sought, the Fianna Fail will be swept away. That is always provided General O'Duffy does not find the delay fretting and make an attempt to force an issue by exploiting the Blue Shirts in political manoeuvres. That poor imitation of Continental Fascism were better allowed to fade quietly away, unmourned.

BUS SERVICES

There is something to be grateful for in the admission of the Kowloon Bus Company that the services it is providing are not the last word in efficiency. Such an admission does at least offer some sort of assurance that an attempt will be made to improve matters and the Company's letter to the K.R.A. makes certain promises and outlines definite lines of attack upon the problem. The solution is by no means easy. It is one thing to arrange perfect schedules and another to maintain them when buses are constantly breaking down. The maintenance of discipline among the staff would appear to be less difficult to tackle—until consideration is given to the low wage scale prevailing, if we are correctly informed. Low wages do not attract the right type of man and are false economy in the end, when buses are run to pieces years before their time. Government Royalty greediness, which comes into this issue, has undoubtedly played its part in the deterioration of the bus services on both sides of the Harbour, and the K.R.A. policy of suspending judgment for the time being is probably the fairest in all the circumstances.

KOWLOON AMENITIES

The Colonial Secretary seems destined to be deluged with letters from the K.R.A. on various matters involving the community welfare on the mainland. Offensive smells, the Salisbury Road bottle-neck, the provision of a typhoon signal at Kowloon City, the supervision of the children's playground and the again postponed covered way in the Ferry traffic circus were among issues considered at the monthly meeting and it might well be asked why some of them, of comparatively trifling cost, have not been removed from the sphere of correspondence long before this. Government finds money to spare to build quarters and residences for public servants, great and small; and an amenity like a typhoon signal must wait.

THE BOTTLE-NECK

Government is on safer ground when it declares that the cost of the removal of the bottleneck at Salisbury Road is no longer justified. The K.R.A. meeting wondered what factors have so changed as to lessen the urgency an improvement considered necessary some years ago. It seems very simple. The allotment to motor-users of the large parking space opposite the Y.M.C.A. has reduced motor traffic into the bottle-neck, if not by one-half, certainly on a scale sufficient to minimise any likelihood of serious congestion or other traffic difficulty for some time to come.

IF I HAD A FORTUNE . . .

WHERE WOULD I LIVE?

Asks ERIC LINKLATER

AUTHORS, uncaptured criminals, and winners of sweepstake prizes are among the few people at liberty to choose where they shall live. For the vast majority of people in this orderly and civilised world it is external circumstances that decide the question.

A man may, of course, choose between one suburb and another, and his wife can easily decide on a third. But except within these narrow limits of selection there is little freedom, for the demands of office, shop, factory, foundry, or professional connections speak in a stern, determined voice that must be obeyed.

And so one often hears people wistfully saying, "Oh, if only I were independent! If only I were at liberty to live just where I pleased!" And they think that if they had £30,000 in the bank, and the freedom which that sum can bestow, they would live happily ever after.

But as a matter of fact they would be faced with an appalling difficulty, especially if they had any imagination. For so many and various are the attractions of the world that it is by no means easy to decide where to live.

COMPANIONSHIP PROBLEM.

Perhaps you nurse a romantic nostalgia for the South Seas? But which of ten thousand islands, all unfamiliar, would you decide upon were you to win a fortune? And unless you propose to live like Crusoe in solitude, whom would you choose to accompany you and how would you persuade them that, for example, the Society Islands are preferable to the Marquesas, or that the amenities of Norfolk Island are superior to those of Bali, Honolulu, and Tahiti?

And at last, after a year of debate and two years of exploration, when eventually you had discovered some green paradise beside a lagoon of heaven's blue, would not the bliss of your existence be shattered by the realisation that you were 800 miles from the nearest dentist?

But, you say, you have no inclination for tropic islands. You have heard of the charms of Continental life, and a villa at any one of half a dozen places would suit you very well.

COUNTRY DRAWBACKS.

Alas! when you have settled down, there is a fall in sterling, the exchange goes villainously against you, and the income from even £30,000 shrinks like a cheap woollen bathing suit.

You return to England and take a cottage in Devonshire, and decide that home is best. But after your foreign travels, and because of your independence, you now adopt a critical attitude to your fellow-countrymen, and in summer the multitude of trippers offends you, and the winters you find dull because the neighbours are scarcely to your liking. You also hanker for the theatre, the restaurant gnieties, and the hearty, bustle of London—and you hear of a pleasant and opportunely vacant house in Hampstead.

London at first delights you, but by-and-by boredom again descends on you, for now you have no work to do, and work, though undoubtedly a perversion, is the best and most satisfying of the perversions. So once more you seek distraction in travel, and to improve your mind you read widely as you go and so collect a vast number of books.

And as you pass from Egypt to India, from China to Japan and South America, your wife accumulates a huge quantity of curios, nick-nacks, and supposititious works of art. But what is the use of books unless you have a library; of curios unless you can display them for the delight and envy of your friends? So yet again you are forced to look for a house.

ATTRACTIVE LONDON.

It is, I think, regrettable that the majority of roads lead to London. It is wrong that London should draw from all other parts of the country with a force almost equal to that of gravity: for what I have said to authorship applies equally well to many other trades.

This tendency, however, is not new. Both Queen Elizabeth and King James I., if I remember rightly, realised its existence and deciding that it was contrary to the welfare of the country decreed that their nobility must spend long periods of time on their own estates.

Now there are still in existence territorial magnates and moneyed people with country residences, and it would be no bad thing if those Tudor and Stuart ordinances were revived and they were compelled to live in their country homes, not merely to own them from a distance. They could foster local life, industrially, socially, and even intellectually, and so provide rival centres of interest to London.

But perhaps it is impractical to expect legislation on such lines, and the problem of where to live, when it exists, must be answered individually.

It may not be so important, after all, as the companion question, how to live? And perhaps they be answered together: to my mind there is a great deal to be said for the cowboy fashion, the gold-seeker fashion, the war-time fashion of six months on active service and six days of magnificent abandon to luxury. Hard work and comparative solitude produce a Gargantuan appetite for pleasure, and then the sins of riotous living may be expiated in more hard work.

It is a good thing to live in the backwoods and at intervals descend on the city hungry and eager as a cowboy or a soldier on leave. "Live dangerously," is a motto for heroes, but "Live variously," is good advice for most people.

"Better buy now, mister. Prices are going up on this stuff."

The Very Idea!

EGGSTRAORDINARY

By Eddie Kelly, Eggspert.

MR. Wynne Jones admitted in Kowloon court the other day that when he was a kid he used to have a passion for sucking condensed milk from a tin.

We were the same way when we were a child, only eggs were our strong suit.

That's why we followed with so much interest the letters in a contemporary about the cruelty to hens at a recent gymkhana. It nearly yolk our heart.

We were talking to the Girl Friend about it when we took her out to dinner the other evening.

"Yes," she said, as we handed her the menu. "I think those beasts were disgustingly cruel to those poor hens. Do you know, Eddie, I think I'll have some chicken to-night!"

Not that chicken has anything to do with eggs. At least, very rarely. You've got to take the good with the bad when you emulate Mr. Wynne Jones' feat.

We used to be very fond of poultry once. They used to even call us the Poult Laurette where we had our last chicken farm.

But we had to give it up. Our hens learnt all about birth control, and used to lay their eggs standing up. This was the origin of scrambled eggs.

There were so many bad eggs in our hen house, too. Most of these ended by becoming hard boiled.

Even a hen house, like Chicago, can have its Al. Capon.

At the place where we have been staying since our creditors chased us out of our flat we have been fed nothing but bacon and eggs for breakfast. We're so sick of Bacon that we prefer even Robert Burns now. And even Bacon Burns.

In fact, our opinion of bacon and eggs is eggsactly what you think it is.

"I wonder," asks "Vinjar" in the South China Morning Post, "what the average resident would think if he were suddenly confronted by a lizard-like reptile?" BAH!

What's a mere lizard or two? What's a dragon? We've seen thousands of 'em.

"Vinjar" mentioned the monitor lizard seen on Lugard Road in January, 1930. We were one of the group of people who saw it. It was on January 1, which explains everything. The lizard ambled up to us, breathing fire. We fixed it by breathing our breath.

There are several lizards and reptiles inhabiting the swamps of Hongkong. We were in the Peninsula swamp one day when we were accosted by a couple. We are so inured to them that we took no notice, so they eventually went away and ordered their own drinks.

We never did care for lizards with watery eyes.

DANGEROUS

He first met her at the Hotel Roof Garden one Saturday evening, and noticed her expensive frock and the other things that went with it. But when she confessed a little later that she enjoyed cigarettes and cocktails he made up his mind to have nothing further to do with her. So it was not until Monday evening that he 'phoned her to go on a car ride with him.

RECIPE

Take one white sandy beach, three or four children, a couple of small dogs, a handful of spades and buckets, unlimited quantity of sea-water, and a pinch of sea-shells.

Mix the children, the dogs, the spades, and buckets together, and add to the beach, stirring constantly. Pour the sea water over the beach, sprinkle with shells, place under a clear blue sky, and bake the whole mixture in the hot sun. When brown, set away to cool in bed.

THREATENED SPLIT IN CABINET

MANY INJURED IN RIOTS

VIENNA, SEPT. 17.

WITH A CABINET SPLIT THREATENED AND SERIOUS RIOTING AT GRAZ AND IN CARINTHIA, AUSTRIA IS IN POLITICAL FERMENT.

Her fate may be decided in the next two or three days. Herr Winkler, leader of the National Front, has come out firmly in opposition to the Fascist activities of the Heimwehr and has warned Dr. Dollfuss that he must choose between Fascism and anti-Fascism.

Serious rioting occurred to-day at Spittal-Anderdran, in Carinthia, as a result of the direct action tactics of the Heimwehr.

Six civilians, two policemen and a military officer, were seriously injured during the disturbance. Troops were compelled to charge with fixed bayonets before demonstrating peasants were dispersed.

The cause of the outbreak was purely political.

The peasants were demanding the reinstatement of the Governor of Carinthia, whom the Heimwehr removed from office.

The spirit which provoked the disturbance is spreading to other quarters.

Serious dissensions within the Austrian Cabinet which are likely to considerably embarrass the Chancellor, Dr. Dollfuss, in dealing with the Austro-German question, were revealed at Graz this afternoon.

The disclosure was made by the Vice-Chancellor, Herr Winkler, at a press conference which followed upon the riotous accompaniment to an attempt by Nazis to break up a demonstration by Herr Winkler's National Front.

SMOKE BOMBS.

Smoke bombs were hurled into the crowd by about two hundred Nazis, who revealed themselves by raising their hands in a Hitler salute during the playing of the Austrian national anthem.

An infuriated crowd launched an attack immediately after the throwing of the bombs. Ten persons, including women, were burned, eight of them being sent to hospital. Ten of the Nazis barely escaped lynching. Mounted police charged and scattered the Nazis.

THREAT TO RESIGN.

The affair was bitterly referred to by Herr Winkler when met press representatives later.

He practically threatened to resign his post in the capital and has more or less presented Dr. Dollfuss with an ultimatum.

He declared that the National Front rejected any form of Fascism, adding that the recent activities of the Heimwehr (the Fascist organisation under Prince von Starhemberg) had become intolerable.

DR. DOLLFUSS WARNED.

"A position has been reached as a result of their activities," he said, "where Dr. Dollfuss must make up his mind what course he is going to follow."—Reuter.

MARXISM OVER.

Vienna, Sept. 11.

"The era of Marxism and capitalism in Austria is over. We are determined to construct a new era on a Christian basis with authoritative leadership," declared Dr. Engelbert Dollfuss, the Austrian Chancellor, in a speech at a patriotic demonstration of 70,000 people last week.

He added that Austria and Germany should stand together, but the big brother had refused to understand her. Against other states they would have used sterner measures than those taken against Germany.

ON VERGE OF DICTATORSHIP.

Vienna, Sept. 10.

The address given before an audience of more than 60,000 persons in celebration of the anniversary of the defeat of the Turkish invaders in 1683, was taken in most capitals as an indication that it was intended for foreign as well as domestic consumption.

Dr. Dollfuss indicated that Austria was on the verge of a complete dictatorship and that the form of government the country may adopt will root out liberal capitalism, "selfish materialistic Marxism" and political terrorism.

The reference to "political terrorism" was directed at German Nazis who are accused by the Chancellor of forcing Austria into extreme action. Throughout the address, which was punctuated by sensational statements, the Chancellor indicated that Austria, while appreciating the support of friendly nations, intends to strengthen her own government and if possible her military forces.

GERMAN FRIENDSHIP WANTED.

"The day of strength for liberal capitalism, Marxism and all the other systems that have been found wanting is past," Dr. Dollfuss said. "We must have strength but we have the right to gain that strength by our own methods."

Referring directly to the disorders created by the Nazis in Austria in an apparent attempt to overthrow his government, the Chancellor said Austria had often expressed a wish for friendship with Germany.

"We still wish that friendship but it must be honourable," the Chancellor said. "If it is not honourable it will be worthless and we demand full freedom in our own house. We intend to have that freedom."

Dispatches from European capitals late to-night reported that the address was interpreted in most places as a virtual announcement that Austria intends to establish a dictatorship.—United Press.

COLONY OVERRUN WITH BEGGARS

POLICE ORDERS TO GET RID OF THEM

The Colony is at present overrun with beggars, and police have received instructions to have the Colony cleared of them.

"We have had complaints and we have had strict orders to clear the beggars" remarked Sub-Inspector Russell in the Central Police Court this morning, when Mr. Balfour dealt with a batch of beggars, including two cripples, a blind boy and an aged woman.

S. I. Russell mentioned that in one case where a woman was charged, complaints had been received from shopkeepers in Pedder Street. She had a whole crowd of girls to beg for her outside the Hongkong Hotel.

Defendants were severally fined $5 or seven days' gaol each, while the aged woman was bound over and the blind boy cautioned. The boy stated he came from Macao.

MANSLAUGHTER CHARGE FAILS

ABERDEEN FIGHT SEQUEL

A midnight incident on Middle Island off Aberdeen on August 7 led to the appearance of Lo Lung at the Criminal Sessions which opened this morning, charged with the manslaughter of Tsang Kin, alias Wu Lui.

Prisoner, a fisherman, age about 40, pleaded not guilty and after hearing the evidence for the Crown Counsel, Mr. Lim, submitted that there was no case to go to the jury.

His Lordship, the Chief Justice, accepting this submission, released the jury from hearing further evidence in the case and ordered the prisoner's discharge.

Mr. J. A. Fraser, the Assistant Attorney General, opening the case, stated that a number of fishermen, including deceased and Lo Lung, slept on Middle Island on the night in question. About midnight a cry was heard of "Save life." Witnesses would state that they went and found Wu Lui and Lo Lung together, the former being in great pain. He expired shortly afterwards and Lo disappeared.

In consequence of what the injured man had said, a search was immediately made for Lo and he was found, the next day hiding on a hill on the island. He was brought back to the temple and tied to a pole until the arrival of the police.

MEAL TIME QUARREL.

Prisoner was eventually charged with manslaughter at the police court and he then said "I killed Wu Lui. After I struck him he fell down and I ran away. He was my foki. I hope you will give me a chance". Later he said "We were having congee together and had a quarrel and used our fists."

If the killing was accidental, said Mr. Fraser, that would make no difference to the case for the Crown which was, that Wu Lui was killed whilst engaging with prisoner in an unlawful act.

Dr. R. S. Begbie deposed that he examined the body of the dead man some 30 to 48 hours after life had expired. He found no signs of violence externally and such signs, if any, would have been obliterated by the decomposition which had set in. Deceased had apparently been suffering from acute, active malaria and had a spleen enlarged to about three times normal size. It was an injury to the spleen which had been the direct cause of death but in its enlarged condition any slight violence, fall, or exertion would prove fatal within an hour.

Three fishermen who discovered Wu and captured the prisoner gave evidence, and Inspector Vincent and Acting Sub-Inspector Armitt gave formal evidence.

Mr. Lim said that in the police court hearing, prisoner had said that the fight occurred about 7 or 8 p.m. and as this evidence had not been contraverted he suggested that deceased might have received a fatal injury during the four hours between the fight and midnight. He might have fallen or hurt himself whilst arranging nets during that time, and as the delivery of the blow by prisoner had not been established, he submitted that the Crown had failed to make out a case for the jury.

According to medical evidence Wu would have succumbed an hour and if the fight took place at 8 p.m. prisoner's blow could not have been the cause.

CORRESPONDENCE

LORD LYTTON AND MANCHURIA.

To The Editor.
Hongkong Telegraph.

Sir,—As one interested in the final solution of the Far Eastern crisis and the prevention of another world catastrophe, allow me to comment on Lord Lytton's significant challenge recently hurled at the London Times for the latter's acceptance of Manchukuo as a fait accompli. Lord Lytton has chosen an appropriate occasion, the anniversary of the historic Mukden incident, to add some fuel to the dying flame of the League of Nations.

The Times has accepted facts and realities which are too well-known to all realistic and order-loving people. In refutation, Lord Lytton points to the verdict of the League declaring Japan wrong and guilty, and censures the Times statement as inimical to the foundations of world peace. It is but natural for Lord Lytton to try to vindicate the report which bears his name and gave him fame, but it is likewise natural for right-thinking and clear-perceiving people to view things as they actually are and not as they seem.

The justice or injustice of Japan's adventure in Manchuria is still a moot question, the League verdict notwithstanding, simply because the League itself, through its vacillations and impotency, has become almost extinct. The rights or wrongs of the Mukden incident two years ago are now secondary to the burning question of whether the new Manchuria is better off under Japanese protection and a blessing to the world at large. The sooner the family of nations gets accustomed to facing realities the better for it and the cause of peace. Foreign nations, members or supporters of the League, that have huge economic interests in Manchukuo should be honest enough to admit that complete security and order prevail there. Even the Chinese inhabitants of Manchukuo, who are in overwhelming majority, know deep down in their hearts that they enjoy infinitely better protection for their business and their necks which they would never have under their own wrangling warlords.

Two eventful years have elapsed since the fateful Mukden incident. Japan has been bitterly criticized, rebuked and convicted on paper, and yet with Spartan tenacity and courage she has carried on, clinging to her thesis that she has done it not only to safeguard her own future but also to rescue China from chaos and anarchy and to save this part of the world from the ominous spectre of Red vandalism. It is yet too premature to give a true appraisal of the merits of Japan's claims. Future generations will take care of that, but present conditions seem to justify her means, and even her most rabid critics will not deny that Japan's adventure in Manchuria is a safety-valve and a stabilizing influence so essential to a world suffering from upheavals and calamities everywhere.

The imperative need of the moment is not to save the face of the League, for under present circumstances there is no League to be saved at all. The rise of nationalisms and dictatorships in Europe as well as in the Americas has knocked to pieces the old idea of a super-State founded upon obsolete theories. The crying need of the hour is to discipline peoples and nations in the courageous, honest facing of cold realities. In that way a stronger and firmer League may be set up, based on realities and not on illusions, grounded on facts and not on dreams. It is terribly hard to face what is real, for human nature is fond of rainbows, but the best medicines are usually those which taste bitter.

"Cavalcade."

It is currently rumoured that when the above film is shown, later, in the week, it will be "cut" to admit of the filming of one or two "shorts" before it. In the public interest, as well as its own, would the management of the King's Theatre, issue to the press a confirmation or denial of this rumour?

THE FOOCHOW SITUATION

ALARMS GRADUALLY DYING AWAY

Our Foochow Correspondent writes:—

It is now reliably reported that the Reds have retired from the neighbourhood of Yenping, but it is hard to be sure as no one has apparently been able to get through from Yenping to Foochow, and telegraphic communication is still broken. This lack of communication is attributed to "ordinary" bandits, who are very naturally taking advantage of the disturbed conditions to line their empty pockets.

The three American Dominican fathers in Kienning made an effort to get through to Foochow more than a week ago, but had to return to Kienning on account of fighting in the vicinity of Yenping. As far as I know, no other foreigners are in any up-river station; those who were on the point of going up after their holiday at Kuliang being still held up in Foochow.

It seems certain that no walled city was occupied by the Reds. Yangkow and Wangtai which they occupied near Yenping are unwalled market towns or large villages.

TROOPS IN CONFLICT.

The Chinese have latterly been more exercised over rumours of trouble between the different elements on the Government's side. Apparently Lu Hsing-pang and the XIXth Army have not been co-operating as they should, nor have the XIXth Army and the 56th division under Liu Ho-ting (who now occupies Kienningfu). And the Naval forces who were hurried into Foochow from Amoy and elsewhere were said to be prepared to challenge the XIXth Army, which has become very unpopular owing to the exorbitant taxation.

I hear, however, that the trouble has now been settled, and a compromise arranged by which the while the XIXth Army controls the City. One hopes a greater sense of security will soon prevail.

WORLD RECORDS LOWERED

NEW FIGURES FOR 60 METRES

Poznan, Poland, Sept. 17.

An astonishing track performance by Miss Stella Walsh, the Polish athlete saw new world's record figures established for 100 and 60 metres to-day.

Miss Walsh, who set up a new record for the 100 metres at the Los Angeles Olympics last year, lowered them to-day when she covered the distance in 11 8-10th seconds.

Her time at the Olympics was 11 9-10th seconds, when she beat Hilda Strike of Canada by two feet, with Wilhelmina Bremen (U.S.) and Eileen Hiscock (Britain) occupying third and fourth places respectively.

IN TENNIS MATCH

London, Aug. 27.

The amateurs beat the professionals in their annual tennis match at Devonshire Park Eastbourne, by 6—3. The amateurs owed their victory mainly to their superiority in doubles, for the singles resulted in a tie of three matches all, whilst in the doubles the professionals, whose opportunities for first-class doubles play are necessarily limited, were beaten in all three matches.

In the top match Maskell dominated the game with the superior spread of his ground shots. As the ball was keeping low Olliff was perpetually scooping them up, particularly on the backhand, and Maskell came up to the net and smashed. Olliff, in an endeavour to force the pace, tried to come to the net himself, but although he was half volleying brilliantly Maskell's passing shots and lobs were inspired and he made scarcely a mistake. Maskell finished the match with a cross court back-hand drive—a shot with which he had constantly scored—and a smash.

RESULTS.

Singles.—J. S. Olliff (Amateurs) lost to D. Maskell, 1—6, 1—6; H.F. David (Amateurs) beat T. C. Jeffery, 6—1, 6—2; C. R. D. Tuckey (Amateurs) lost to F. H. Poulson, 3—6, 3—6; R. K. Tinkler (Amateurs) lost to C. R. Read, 2—6, 6—2, 9—11; I. H. Wheatcroft (Amateurs) beat A. C. Roberts, 7—9, 6—3, 10—8.

Doubles.—Olliff and Wheatcroft (Amateurs) beat Maskell and Jeffrey, 2—6, 6—4, 6—3; Tinkler and Tuckey (Amateurs) beat Pearce and Poulson, 6—4, 7—5; David and Ritchie (Aamteurs) beat Read and Roberts, 6—1, 6—3.

CAPTURE LADIES DOUBLES

German players won three of the five titles in the German tennis championships held recently in Hamburg.

G. von Cramm again won the men's singles, Frl. Krahwinkel won the women's singles for the first time, and in partnership Von Cramm and Frl. Krahwinkel retained the mixed doubles championship.

Great Britain won the women's doubles championship for the fourth time since 1929 when Mrs. Pittman and Miss K. E. Stammers beat Miss E. M. Dearman and Miss N. M. Lyle in the final, and J. Satoh and R. Nunoi took the men's doubles title to Japan for the first time.

Great Britain's team of eight players gave a creditable account of themselves, and the experience of playing against some of the best Continental players should prove of benefit to their game. So many of Britain's leading players are abroad that the team nominated by the Lawn Tennis Association consisted largely of the coming generation of players, C. R. D. Tuckey being the only player ranked among our men, and Mrs. Pittman, Miss Stammers and Miss Lyle among the women.

It was not to be expected that the representatives would therefore prevail in the singles events with such players of class as Von Cramm, R. Menzel, J. Satoh, R. Nunoi, Frl. Krahwinkel and Mme. Henrotin in the lists. Nevertheless, Great Britain supplied finalists in the men's doubles, both pairs of finalists in the women's doubles and two pairs of semi-finalists in the mixed doubles.

CENTRE-FORWARD PROBLEM NOW SOLVED

(By "Veritas")

With all of the players worried by the powerful sun, the fast state of the ground and the very trying atmospheric conditions, the practise football match between Kowloon and the Recreio on Saturday, which saw the first appearance this year of these teams, suffered in quality of play and in interest to the spectators.

Kowloon supporters must have left the ground with rather mixed feelings. Although one felt instinctively that the team contained individual merit in abundance, there was a rather alarming lack of co-ordination.

This, of course can, and most probably will, be corrected during the next fortnight. No team is going to be judged conclusively on its first appearance, especially under conditions such as those which existed on Saturday.

For the last two or three years, Kowloon's big weakness has been in the forward line. The advent of Elliott suggests that this, in some measure, is to be removed this winter.

CONSTRUCTIVE PLAN.

But I am inclined to hazard that his presence alone will not prove sufficient to give that cohesive "pep" so badly needed.

Not that the Kowloon forward were a failure against the Recreio. If one judges according to the number of goals scored the very reverse is suggested.

But there was missing a constructive plan; forward line movements capable of breaking up a defence. But even this, I am willing to believe, will come in time. Players were obviously feeling their way on Saturday.

This was especially so with Elliott. Now and again he revealed a distinctive feature, as witness his preparative work for his second goal. It was a movement of clever football and showed quite clearly the possibilities of Elliott as a successful leader of the Kowloon attack.

GOAL SCORER.

Furthermore he can score goals. There is no hesitancy in this ex-Kent Leaguer when he is in front of goal. He uses feet and head with equal facility in guiding the ball to a resting place at the back of the net.

Kowloon are going to miss Bickford, but Blake, when he has conquered the intricacies of ball control, should make himself a useful successor. He has speed and is skilful in his centres.

V. White is a clever little footballer who is more likely to make openings for others to score than to find the net very often himself.

Webb's penchant for wandering, either to a fourth half position, or crowding on Elliott led to a general weakness on the right wing.

Hill was not served well on the wing, either by his vanguard colleagues or the half backs. Hill was much happier in the second half when he went to right back and allowed Jones, the former Tientsin Interporter to take up his rightful position at centre-half.

STRONG HALVES.

Sonny Bliss refused to allow the cares of captaincy to weigh too heavily, and gave his usual active display. Whitfield who was at centre-half in the opening stages, was rather out of the picture, but when Jones came up there was an all-round improvement in the half back line.

The defence was fairly reliable, although inclined to become spreadeagled when confronted by the fast moving, workmanlike Recreio forwards.

Ford made an excellent debut in goal, fielding the ball well and making two splendid judged clearances in the second half when goals appeared certain.

Jones and Goulthy were an effective pair of backs in the first half, and Jones, who seems capable of holding any position behind the forwards, is likely to prove a decided acquisition to the team.

PROMISING RECREIO.

The Recreio, of whom I was bold enough last year to predict a bright future, gave evidence of justifying that prediction. Their chief disability is lack of weight and inches, especially among the forwards. But as a team they have sound ideas of football and plenty of courage to exploit those ideas.

A sad display of shooting in the second half prevented them from earning a draw. On the general run of the play they deserved to draw.

As a team they impressed more than Kowloon, and especially was this noticeable among the forwards.

They also have a fine pair of backs, with Silva-Netto outstanding.

The Recreio won't win the championship this year, but they are on the right road to producing a team capable of performing this. If the Gosano brothers were in the side the Recreio would be capable of beating any team in the league.

Kowloon won by the odd goal in seven, Elliott netting three and V. White (1) for Kowloon, whilst J. Gomes (2) and Sousa replied for the Recreio.

CLUB IMPROVE

CLEVER DISPLAY BY RESERVES

Encouraging improvement was shown by the Hongkong Fotball Club first string against the Lincolns on Saturday, when they won by seven goals to four.

E. Strange and Bickford on the left wing were outstanding for the Club, and are, I am sure, going to justify the prohecy I made concerning them last week.

Strange scored three fine goals, whilst Albert Howe touched his best form and helped himself to two. Bickford and Fowler wre responsible for the other two.

Forward lines dominated throughout. Ridley, Baldry and Hocquard of the Lincolns were ever dangerous. Baldry scored twice, Hocquard and Cousins one each.

The Club, after recovering from a bad start, were slightly superior, but the effectiveness of the forward line in front of goal was the most welcome feature of the team's display.

FINE RESERVES.

There is no doubt that the team is quickly settling down into a first rate combination. Fisher gave another excellent account of himself, scoring two goals and generally worrying the Lincolns defence.

FLOPS IN FOOTBALL FORM

The lion-hearted Spurs did their share on Saturday in hauling down the Arsenal flag when before a record crowd of 57,000 at White Hart Lane, they held last season's League champions to a draw.

Playing with a dash and vigour that almost carried the visitors off their feet in the opening stages of the game, the Spurs raised the jubilation of their supporters to frantic joy when they opened the scoring.

After this however came a setback, W. Evans the right halfback sustaining a severe injury which left him practically helpless. The famous Highbury forward line then swept down the field and stormed the home goal, Jack's trickery making him an outstanding and dangerous player. It was as a direct result of his initial work that Bowden playing at inside right, netted the equaliser whilst the Spurs were still suffering under the handicap of an injured man.

CHELSEA'S BREAK.

A still-faithful band of supporters at the Chelsea venue saw the London team break a series of despondent failures with a win over the redoubtable Villa. Gibson's trickery in front of the visitors' goal, and a remarkable exhibition of keeping by Woodley were the highlights of the match. Gallacher, enemy Chelsea's day of triumph was achieved in the absence of their famous centre-forward, Gallacher, and Mills who deputised for his leader was able to demonstrate what he was never able to prove with Gallacher on the field, that he is both efficient and confident in that position.

Stoke continue to show the hallmark of class with which the other promoted club, the Spurs, have been stamped, and their performance in holding Huddersfield to a draw, was meritorious, though not outstanding considering the colourless form of the Cole Valley club.

Leicester created a surprise by taking both points from Liverpool and Wednesday killed their "at home" hoodoo with a convincing win over Middlesbro'.

UNITED VINDICATED.

A big hand for Manchester United!

They were bound to win sometime but why against Brentford far away from home?

There were not many surprised in the Second Division though I expected Millwall to come out of the local Derby with at least equal honours. However, Fulham took both points from the New Cross ground, emphasising the weakness in the Leicesters' attacking department which their new manager, W. McCraken, is setting out to repair.

Luton and Cardiff were the great failures of the Southern Section.

The latter allowed Torquay to net the only goal of the match and take home two valuable points whilst, Luton who thrashed Torquay to the tune of 10-2 a fortnight previously, could only share the spoils on their own ground with Newport. The match ended in tremendous excitement with the ball lost in a heap of players on the Luton goal-line. When the whistle was blown Kean was discovered sitting on the unfortunate ball.

CHAMPIONS AGAIN

FOR SECOND YEAR IN SUCCESSION

Champions for the second year in succession is the achievement of the Craigengower Cricket Club in the second division of the Lawn Bowls League.

They won the championship again on Saturday when they defeated Civil Service in the concluding match of the season 19 shots. They finished ahead on all three rinks and never at any seriously challenged.

The result leaves the Kowloon Bowling Green Club runners up to the Happy Valley team, with the Recreio third and the Civil Service, until a forthnight ago well in the running for honours, fourth.

NEW TENNIS CHAMPION

Berlin, Sept. 17.

To-day he met W. T. ("Bill") Tilden, former American amateur national champion and holder of the Wimbledon title, in the final round, and won after a four set match.

Tilden, who is 40 years of age, and won his first national title 15 years ago, swept Nuesslein off the court in typical fashion in the first set which he took at 6-1. But his play subsequently lost its sting, and the German, playing confidently proceeded to win the next three sets, Tilden offering but slight resistance in the final stages of the match.

Nuesslein first came to the fore in the professional tennis world in 1930, when he finished runner-up in the German Professional Championship. In the same year he represented Germany in a triangular contest against Great Britain and Holland.

His earliest meeting with Tilden was in 1931, when he played two five-set matches with the American in Hamburg and Berlin, and with Najuch, beat Tilden and Hunter in Paris.

Nuesslein toured America in 1931.—Reuter.

MUNN AND MUNROE.

Two Kowloon Cricket Club batsmen, F. A. Munn and D. H. Munroe, made impressive debuts in the Club's first trial match of the season on Saturday. Munn batted aggressively for 31, which included five boundaries. During his third wicket partnership with G. Lee, which realised 43 runs, he was particularly severe on the short balls on the off.

The pitch was soft after the heavy downpour on Friday night, and played too easily to make the trial a proper test.

U.S. AMATEUR GOLF TITLE.

Dunlap Puts Up Great Exhibition.

MARSTON OUTPLAYED.

Cincinnati, Sept. 16.

George Dunlap, who won the final of the American Amateur Golf Championship to-day, is the American Walker Cup player, who did so well in the British Championships earlier this year.

Meeting Max Marston in the final, Dunlap put up one of the greatest exhibitions of golf in the history of the championship, and won by six and five. He took only 68 for the morning round as compared with Marston's 77. The latter only won the seventh and eighth holes.

A feature of Dunlap's play was his marvellous approach shots, which were never once off the fairways.

Marston played occasional good golf, but his drives off the tees were wild, and his irons inaccurate.

By holing out a 16-foot putt, Dunlap was eight up after the nineteenth, and nine up after the 22nd, when Marston missed a four-footer.

Marston made amends at the next hole by sinking an eight-foot putt to win the hole as well as winning the next two.

At the 26th hole, Dunlap was bunkered, and the 27th was halved.

Marston's score for the outward round was 36, while Dunlap took 38.

Lou Magnolia Dies In New York.

New York, Sept. 17.

Lou Magnolia, the famous boxing referee, who officiated at the Scott-Sharkey fight in 1930 and at most of the famous championship battles in America since Willard's time, died in New York to-day.

Magnolia was a friend and intimate of the late "Tex" Rickard, and the two men were the kings of the fight world, the one as ring arbiter, the other as the most notable match-maker of all time.

Magnolia was as colourful a figure as Rickard was mellow, to the sporting world as Jack Dempsey, and as popular; but despite his wide knowledge of the boxing business he never entered into any phase of it commercially, save as the third man in the ring.—Reuter.

INTERNATIONAL SOCCER.

London, Sept 16.

Ireland created a surprise at Celtic Park to-day by defeating Scotland by two goals to one in the first International soccer match of the season.

Approximately 22,000 spectators watched the game, which was played in glorious weather.

Ireland attacked right from the start, and obtained an early lead through Martin, who put them further ahead just before the interval. They deserved their two-goal lead as they were playing the better football.

Scotland showed none of their traditional style after the interval, but played in hurricane fashion. McPhail scored for them after they had missed a penalty.—Reuter.

CRISIS IN CUBA

BUSINESS ALMOST AT A STANDSTILL

Washington, Sept. 17.

United States government circles believe that the crisis may be expected in Cuba within the next twenty-four hours.

Within this time it may be decided whether the San Martin regime can hope to restore law and order.—Reuter.

Washington, Sept. 16.

The aggravation of the Cuban disorders is enhanced by the possibility of the landing of United States troops, as the lives and property of Americans are increasingly jeopardised.

It is reported that infuriated mobs have attacked an American ice factory and a Spanish shoe factory at Manzanillo.

An abortive rising in the province of Pinar del Rio, although stamped out by the Government has increased the general apprehension.

A stronger guard, reinforced by machine guns, has been posted over the 500 officers loyal to ex-President Carlos Cespedes, who is still imprisoned in the Hotel Nacional.

Meanwhile, President Grau San Martine has rejected the proposal of the leaders of the political factions that he should resign in favour of Dr. Cespedes.—Reuter.

Tension Increasing

Havana, Sept. 17.

Business in Cuba is practically at a standstill as, owing to the uncertainty, Americans are refusing to participate in any transaction unless they have a cash advance.

Meanwhile the tension is increasing owing to threats of a general strike, aiming at the overthrow of the governmet.

They have been given an ultimatum that they must surrender by Monday, by which time three hundred must return to their respective commands, while the others will be expelled from the island.

After a conversation between Mr. Sumner Welles, the U.S. Ambassador to Cuba, and the Committee of the Student Directorate, a member of the Committee stated that Mr. Welles declared that the United States would not intervene in Cuba.

Marines might be landed, however, if the lives or property of Americans were endangered.—Reuter.

MANSFIELD GO AHEAD.

A remarkable sequence of away victories upset expectations in the Northern Section, the surprises being Mansfield, Barnsley, Carlisle, Hartlepools, Barrow, Chester, and Doncaster.

I am glad Mansfield are not going to sink into the slough of despond again and expect them to prove that Saturday's play was no mere flash in the pan.

I thought Walsall and Rotherham could hold their own against the Barrow and Carlisle clubs, but Barnsley are a much improved combination and their decisive defeat of Gateshead is a reminder that they will be a power to reckon with this season.

Chance played noughts and crosses with Scottish football and while Partick suffered another relapse (before St. Johnstone this time), St. Mirren asserted themselves to take the points from their visitors from Falkirk, and Third Lanark held the strong Kilmarnock club to a division of honours. Queen o'South brought off a great coup in travelling to Cowdenbeath to gain both points.

The Airdrie v Hearts match was postponed and the meeting between Celtic and Hamilton was also not played.

KALGAN TENSION

JAPANESE THREAT TO DESTROY CITY

Peking, Sept. 15.

General Sung Cheh-yuan is hurrying back from Tientsin to-night to confer with General Ho Ying-ching concerning the situation in Charhar, created by the Japanese threat of drastic action if the Chinese troops do not withdraw from Kuyuan.

Chinese circles are of the opinion that the Japanese warning was prompted by a fear that the division of General Sung's troops under the Command of General Chao Teng-yu, which recently occupied Kuyuan, may continue their advance on Dolonor, which city is at present held by Manchukuo troops.

It is reported that the local military authorities have already wired to General Chao, ordering him to halt his advance.

Japanese Warning.

Chinese despatches from Kalgan last week told of a threat by Japanese to destroy that city by air attacks unless certain terms were agreed to and complied with immediately.

According to a Kalgan message to the Shih Chieh Wan Po, the Japanese planes appeared over the city and scattered leaflets which contained a warning signed by the head of the Japanese military mission in Jehol City.

The warning complained of an alleged violation of the Tangku Armistice by the troops of General Sung Cheh-yuan in occupying Kuyuan and added that unless these troops evacuated the city to the westward of the armistice line, the Japanese would not only hold General Sung Cheh-yuan responsible for the violation of the armistice, but would bomb and destroy Kalgan.—Reuter.

THE ABERDEEN INDUSTRIAL SCHOOL AND HOME PROJECT

IMPOSING BUILDING PLANNED

("Telegraph" Special).

So much has been said of late on the subject of social services for the poor and needy in the Colony that the quiet efforts of a number of philanthropists who have associated themselves in bringing a special object to completion, have escaped general notice.

These are the group of leading businessmen headed by Mr. Li Yau-tsün, who have undertaken the immense task of building and financing an Industrial School and Home at Aberdeen for poor boys. The scheme has made sufficient headway for a definite start to be now made on the construction of the colossal structure required.

URGENT NEED.

An Industrial Home which is not necessarily a Reformatory (although it was the urgent need for this which gave the scheme its first impetus) has long been in the minds of those in close contact with certain aspects of the social problems of the Colony, and while an Ordinance providing for certain juvenile offences have come into being, its full application has been held up by the lack of a suitable Industrial Home and/or Reformatory in which children and young persons convicted under that Ordinance can be housed.

NO STIGMA.

The new Industrial School has been conceived comprehensively, that is to say that while it will serve as a reformatory for juvenile offenders will essentially be what its name implies—a centre where trades can be learned, where young persons other than juvenile offenders are given a useful start in life, and where this assistance can be rendered without the stigma that is usually attached to a reformatory.

Such a scheme necessarily calls for the co-operation of more than one section of the community, and while Government is nominally in charge of the undertaking, it has been found effective to bring in two other groups.

One of these groups are the philanthropists already alluded to, and the other is the Salesian Order, members of which has earned recognition by the useful work they have locally achieved in the institution known as the St. Louis Industrial School at West Point.

COST AND OPERATION.

In effect, the co-operation may be briefly described as follows:

The merchants and philanthropists to finance the building and, it may be, the equipment.

The Salesian Fathers to be given charge of the building and tuition of the boys when completed.

The site for the School at Aberdeen is situated near the former Paper Mills, and the building to be constructed on it is the imposing one seen in the architect's illustration.

The shell alone will cost $240,000, and oher features including the clock-tower and terrazzo and other ornamental work for which there are separate contracts will have brought the total structural cost to $320,000. The equipment required will be for printing, tailoring, shoe-making, machine and carpentry shops, and will have brought the total cost of the scheme to nearly half a million dollars in its fullest development.

Messrs. Hazeland and Gonella are the architects, and Messrs. Cheong Hing Co., are the contractors, concerned with the principal contract.

The design for the magificent new building which is to serve the purpose of an Industrial School and Reformatory in the Colony. It is to be erected at Aberdeen and it is hoped to complete it in about twelve months. The cost of the building alone is estimated at about $250,000 and the equipment will also be costly.

RUSSO-SINKIANG SECRET PACT

SENSATIONAL REPORT IN CHINESE PAPERS

The conclusion of several secret agreements between Gen. Chin Hsu-jen, former chairman of the Sinkiang Provincial Government, and Soviet Government, by which Gen. Chin pledged to give Soviet traders absolute freedom of domicile and in the conduct of trade in different places of Sinkiang Province, have been reported by Chinese newspapers which claim to make sensational revelations regarding the Soviet Government influence in that Chinese province.

The Chinese papers state that the Central Government is now studying the question carefully, planning to obtain the nullification of these secret agreements as soon as their texts are found, and that Dr. Lo Wen-kan now on his way to Sinkiang is planning to meet Dr. W. W. Yen in the near future when views will be exchanged concerning future diplomatic relations between Sinkiang and Soviet Russia.

After concluding the secret pacts with Soviet Russia, Gen. Chin, the reports alleged, failed to report the existence of such pacts to the Central Government and the revelation of the pacts was not made until Nanking received a petition from the Sinkiang people, embodying a copy of the document. According to this petition, one of the secret pacts was concluded on October 31, 1931, and contained seven articles.

DETAILS OF ARTICLES.

The Chinese papers then gave what they claimed to be the details of these articles. According to these, the Soviet Government would permit Sinkiang merchants to export Sinkiang products to Russia freely, with no limitation whatsoever, while the Sinkiang authorities would give Soviet traders complete freedom of domicile and in the conduct of trade at Tihua, Anchen, Ili and Peichen and the Soviet traders would also have the right to send their agents to carry on business at different places in Sinkiang. Soviet officials and nationals would also be given freedom to travel in Sinkiang free from the interference of the local authorities so long as they abided by the laws and regulations of the land.

Another article of the secret pact, according to the report, stipulated that Soviet Russia should provide Sinkiang with all machinery and implements necessary for the development of the province and the Soviet authorities should help in establishing electric plants and various factories as well as in developing agricultural and industrial enterprise and should supply all necessary machines for such purposes. Soviet Russia should also supply experts and train Chinese engineers in the development of the province.

That the Soviet nationals in Sinkiang should pay the same tax and duties as the Chinese and that all trade contracts signed between the Soviet and Chinese merchants should be registered with the government office within five days of signature were stipulated in other articles of the secret agreement, according to the report.

The Chinese papers declared that the seventh and last article of the above agreement the Soviet Government had refused to carry out because this article stated that Chinese goods destined to Sinkiang or Sinkiang products destined for China Proper should have the right to pass through the Soviet territory. The Soviet Government objected to this article and consequently it was rendered null and void by an annex to the agreement which said that the Sinkiang Government had taken note of the refusal of the Soviet Government to accept the article mentioned because it was against the law of Soviet Russia, the Chinese papers concluded.

DICTATORSHIP IN JAPAN

SAITO CABINET TO TO REMAIN

"The spectacle of a 76-year-old Premier trying to rejuvenate the country with the help of an 80-year-old Finance Minister, a 78-year-old Home Minister, and a 69-year-old Foreign Minister," is the somewhat caustic summing-up, by the Tokyo Asahi of the attempt now being made to stabilise the government's hand.

Criticisms there have been, both of the aged Premier and of his principal colleagues in the Cabinet; but even their most vigorous critics are prepared to admit that successors, capable of commanding the respect and confidence of the country at large under present circumstances, are nowhere to be found. The present Cabinet is, in fact, a compromise between a dictatorship, such as the hot-headed reactionary elements desire, and party government, which the party politicians are so anxious to restore.

With the ever increasing distrust of the political parties, it is generally believed that if a party cabinet were to succeed Viscount Saito's "National" Government at this moment,—it would precipitate a major crisis and very possibly lead not only to the establishment of a dictatorship, but to the complete overthrow of the parliamentary system.

Because of this grave danger everything possible is now being done to prolong the life of the present Cabinet, and to ensure the support of the party leaders for the forthcoming budget and for such fundamental administrative measures as the Government considers necessary.

Political parties, whose heads recently visited Premier Saito, have been led to conclude that the only alternative to the support of the present National Government appears to be the overthrow of the Saito Ministry and its probable replacement by a dictatorship. As this would almost inevitably sound the death-knell, not only of party government but of parliamentary government as well, the support of the political parties solicited by the Premier, even though grudgingly given, appears to be a foregone conclusion.

UNMANIFESTED CARGO

ATTEMPT TO EVADE FREIGHT CHARGE

Chu Ha-hoi from Shanghai, was brought before Mr. Wynne-Jones at the Kowloon Magistracy this morning charged with placing unmanifested cargo on board the Jardine steamer Kwaisang yesterday afternoon.

Sergeant Davies said defendant was found on board ship with a mirror measuring about four feet by two. Defendant should have paid freight for it, but did not do so. The freight for the mirror would have been $3, in addition to duty at Shanghai.

Sergeant Davies.—I don't know. How much does it cost, sir?

SEQUEL TO FATAL ACCIDENT

Lorry Driver Faces Serious Charges

Hearing of the case against Li Wing, a lorry driver, charged with dangerous driving a lorry with inefficient brakes, and carrying an excess load, was commenced before Mr. Schofield, at the Central Magistracy this morning, and adjourned until Friday noon.

The defendant is alleged to having driven his lorry on September 6, at 10.30 a.m. down Pokfulam Road and turned East into Queen's Road, knocking down an aged man, Wong Fun, who succumbed to his injuries. The brakes of the lorry were subsequently tested, and found to be totally useless.

When the case was first heard, the defendant pleaded guilty to the second and third charges, but denied the first.

Dr. Thomas, of the Government Civil Hospital, said that the deceased was admitted in a dying condition, and died after admittance. His injuries were compatible with his having been run over by a motor vehicle.

FOREMAN'S STORY.

Tsang Hing-wah foreman of the Fat Li Company, who was seated beside the driver, said that the lorry was loaded with earth, and the speed registered on the speedometer when it was going down Pokfulum Road was ten miles an hour.

The driver sounded the horn when he took the turn round the corner. Deceased was crossing Queen's Road, carrying a load on a pole. When witness first saw deceased, the man was about one foot away from the lorry. He heard the driver shout, 'stop, don't cross,' and then saw the man. He was not talking to the driver. The right front mudguard of the lorry struck the man, and when the lorry stopped, he saw an Indian policeman and the driver of a police van carrying the man to the pavement. They were about two or three feet away from the lorry then.

DID NOT SOUND HORN.

P. C. Mohamed Akbar said that the deceased was walking along the road. After knocking down the man, the lorry stopped about ten or fifteen feet away. A police van was stationary on the south side of Queen's Road about eight yards away from Pokfulum Road. The lorry was being driven fairly fast, and the driver did not sound the horn. It would have been possible for the driver to have avoided the man if he had swerved to his left.

Traffic Sergeant McInnis gave evidence on the testing of the brakes, which he said were inefficient. He also said that the spot where the accident occurred was at least 20 yards away from the corner of Pokfulum Road.

The hearing was then adjourned.

STEALS BATHING DRESSES

FROM CLOTHES-LINES IN KOWLOON

"Defendant seems to have made it a practice to steal bathing costumes," said Inspector Bloor at the Kowloon Magistracy this morning when before Mr. Wynne-Jones he charged a youth named Cheung San with larceny of three bathing custumes from various addresses in Prince Edward Road.

Inspector Bloor said defendant was seen with a bundle containing bathing costumes yesterday afternoon and on being questioned, admitted having taken them from clothes-line on the roofs of houses in Prince Edward Road.

Admitting a previous conviction, defendant was sentenced to three months' hard labour in all.

NEW JAPANESE "REVELATIONS"

FOREIGN BOGIES TO UNIFY PEOPLE

POSSIBILITY OF NEW WAR

The Japanese public according to advices from Tokyo, is giving full credence to the "revelations" published by the press in regard to secret treaties aimed against Japan, foreign spies, Soviet military concentrations along the Manchurian border, renewed naval armament races and other alleged manifestations of hostile intent against this country.

By some observers this is interpreted as indicating that authorities are bent in preparing the ground for a war which will divert the people's attention from troubles and difficulties nearer home. This interpretation, however, finds little support in responsible quarters, where it is believed that those responsible for national defence desire above all else a breathing-space to consolidate for themselves the position gained for themselves on the neighbouring mainland during the past two years.

Similarities to Soviets

Until this work of consolidation has been completed, therefore, a full-scale war with a foreign Power would be as unpropitious for Japan as it would be for the Soviet before that county's gigantic schemes of internal consolidation and reconstruction are completed.

Foreign observers note a similarity between the position in Japan and the Soviet, where, they say, foreign bogies are continually being held up in order to unify the people and encourage them to complete the work of reconstruction despite temporary hardships.

Nevertheless, whatever bogies are raised and whatever their effect upon the peoples of the two countries, it is believed that those in power in Russia and Japan have far more reason for desiring peace than for plunging into armed conflict.

This desire, it is thought, will persist at least until the work of consolidation and reconstruction has been consummated.—Reuter.

According to a reliable source, the military expenses in Manchuria for next year will be around Yen 160,000,000. The total budget of the War Office including the regular expense and those for "new demands" will be about Yen 583,000,000.—United Press.

LADY ATTACKED IN STREET

HAS HANDBAG SNATCHED

"Elgin Street is a quiet place and if ladies cannot walk there without being molested it certainly is a bad thing," said Sub-Inspector Smith in the Central Police Court this morning when an unemployed Chinese pleaded guilty before Mr. Balfour to stealing a handbag from Mrs. Ma Yu-shi, 32, Robinson Road.

Complainant was walking alone down Elgin Street with the handbag under her arm. The thief approached from in front, snatched the bag and fled. He was pursued by Mrs. Ma and caught by a district watchman. He struggled, broke loose, and made a second bid for freedom. A Chinese constable joined in the chase and eventually caught the thief.

The bag contained $42.35 in money and a bunch of keys, and was in the defendant's possession when he was arrested.

Three months' hard labour was passed.

D.S.P. (R)

STRIKE TROUBLES.

More than 150,000 workers are on strike throughout the United States.

The strikers include 45,000 New York and 25,000 New Jersey silk workers, 70,000 Pennsylvania miners, 5,500 Massachusetts shoe workers and 5,000 California raisin workers.

GIVEN BENEFIT OF DOUBT

ALLEGED COUNTERFEIT COINS

Cheung Chun, 38, a travelling trader, appeared in the dock of the Central Police Court this morning before Mr. [illegible] charged with possession of 360 counterfeit Kwangtung Province twenty cents pieces. He was discharged.

Mr. P. H. Sin appeared for the defence and pleaded not guilty.

A district watchman said he arrested the defendant in Queen's Road West.

Mr. Sin: When you searched the accused did you examine the money there and then?

Witness: I opened only one roll.

Mr. Sin: In what respect do your allege that these coins are counterfeit?—Because they are light. The colour is different and the sound is different.

Lam Hoi, a money changer of the Cheung Kee firm of money changers, with over twenty years experience testified that the coins were all low grade, and they could not be palmed off in the market.

Mr. Sin: Are you aware that there are travellers in this class of trade who buy these coins and resell them?—There is such a kind of business.

And it is a legitimate business in?—Yes.

Mr. Sin: If I produce a silver dollar and there is a slight mark on it it is not counterfeit. I get 98 cents change from a money changer. It is a recognised custom in Hongkong.

Mr. Balfour: The doubt about this case is whether these coins were legally made by the Kwangtung Government or are counterfeit.

STOLE TO HELP GRANDMOTHER

TAXICAB CLERK'S LAPSE

Giving the excuse that he needed the money as his grandmother was sick in the country, Siu Chi-wah, 32, pleaded guilty before Mr. Wynne-Jones at the Kowloon Magistracy this morning to a charge of larceny of $162.65 on June 17.

Detective Sergeant Poyntz stated that defendant was employed by the Blue Taxicab Company as a telephone clerk at a salary of $35 a month. On June 17, he was left in charge of the cash box while the cashier went across the street for some food. When the cashier returned, he found defendant had disappeared with all the available cash.

A report was then made to the Police and a warrant issued for the arrest of the defendant. Nothing was heard of him until Saturday afternoon when one of the employees of the Taxicab Company saw him walking along Prince Edward Road. He was taken to the Yaumati Police Station, where he admitted the offence.

It was stated that accused had been employed with the Taxicap Company for only two and a half months, and previous to his employment had been in Siam.

Sentence of three months was passed.

GREAT FUTURE FOR INVESTORS

Manila, Sept. 15.

Hongkong investors and business men are greatly interested in Philippine gold mining ventures and are keenly watching the flurry in stocks, according to Mr. A. A. Botelho at present a visitor in Manila.

Mr. Botelho who is agent for Sorox in Hongkong, arrived in Manila on a business trip from Hongkong.

Baguio Gold and Antamok are the favourites of Hongkong investors but other mining stocks are also being bought, Mr. Botelho declared. It is said that Hongkong business men are preparing to make heavy investments in Philippine mining stocks.

"If the trip to Hongkong could be shortened by means of a regular air service, investments would increase tremendously," Mr. Botelho said. "Gold mining," he continued "is going to be one of the major sources of wealth in the Philippines."

CONTRACT BRIDGE

By W. E. McKenney

As I have often explained, a third hand opening may be made with very little strength. However at no time should an original no trump bid be made with anything less than the regular requirements, which are three to three and one-half high-card tricks, tenace positions, no singleton or weak doubleton. Therefore if your partner makes an original no trump bid in third position, you have a right to count him for a very fine hand.

The following hand which was played in the national mixed team-of-four championship at Asbury Park this summer produces not only a bidding problem but also an interesting squeeze.

The Bidding

South is the dealer, and while the hand contains three high-card tricks it does not have re-bid values. Therefore I believe it is better to pass with this type of hand. West also passes and North, having a very fine hand, should open the bidding with one no trump. East should pass and now South can make a slam try, by going to three no trump. One North player was then bold enough to bid six no trump. Of course six no trump is easily made if you get the heart opening.

The Play

However, with a club opening, you must develop the squeeze. The trick is won in dummy with the

	♠Q-5-4-3 ♥A-Q-J ♦A-2 ♣A-J-7-6
♠8-6-2 ♥8-6-2 ♦6-5-4 ♣10-9-8-3	NORTH WEST EAST Dealer SOUTH	♠K-J ♥K-10-9-4-3 ♦J-10-7-3 ♣4-2
	♠A-10-9-7 ♥7-5 ♦K-Q-9-8 ♣K-Q-5	18

king and a small spade led to declarer's queen which East wins with the king. East returns another club, dummy wins the trick and continues the club, declarer winning with the jack.

The ace of clubs is then cashed by North. East must discard hearts, as he cannot let go one of his diamonds or the diamond suit will be set up. On the last club, dummy discards a heart. Declarer then returns a small spade and East's jack drops, setting the spade suit in dummy.

Declarer cashes the two spades and East is helplessly squeezed. On the first spade he can discard a heart, but on the second spade he must either bear down to the king of hearts or let go one of his diamonds. His best play, of course, is to drop the ten of hearts, hoping that the declarer will take the finesse, but the declarer goes right up with the ace, capturing the king and successfully making his small slam.

A SCARE AT OBSERVATORY VILLAS YESTERDAY

The roof of No. 6, Observatory Villas, a two-storeyed house in Kowloon, collapsed about 4.30 p.m. yesterday.

The collapse was attended by a terrific crash as tons of masonry fell through to the first floor. Luckily the house was untenanted, having been vacant for six or seven months.

None of the houses on either side suffered any damage.

A shoring has been put up to support the party walls which appear to be in a dangerous condition. The tenants of the adjoining building have been advised to move out.

Observatory Villas, which consists of a block of five two storeyed European houses, are amongst the oldest buildings in the Colony.

House No. 6 was formerly occupied by Mr. M. J. Patell, director of the firm of Apcar and Co., Ltd.

CINEMA SCREENINGS

NOTES SUPPLIED BY THE THEATRES

That this film will enhance her already popular position with filmgoers can definitely be relied on. She is great! No finer story could have been found for her, and Cicely dances through the whole film, riotously funny in her brilliant burlesque and enchanting in her emotional simplicity.

In one scene Cicely Courtneidge does a burlesque on adagio acrobatics, and anyone who can sit through this without laughing helplessly can assure themselves that they possess no sense of humour.

Edward Everett Horton plays opposite Cicely Courtneidge, and this fine American actor, with his subtle humour and quaint mannerisms, is an excellent foil to the bouyant Cicely. Several well-known variety acts take part, and the result is a fascinating study of a new type of film background.

"Temple Drake"

"The Story of Temple Drake," William Faulkner's unusual tale of present-day youth, will be shown from Wednesday at the Queen's Theatre with Miriam Hopkins in the title role and Jack LaRue, William Gargan, William Collier, Jr., Irving Pichel and Sir Guy Standing heading the supporting cast.

Miss Hopkins, as the heroine of the film, is a curious mixture of the sedate and the wanton—who refuses an offer of marriage from the young lawyer she loves, and drives off with a drunken college boy in search of more liquor. The ride ends in a crash, and the pair climb from the wreckage to find themselves virtual prisoners of a big-city gangster in a desolate country hideaway.

The gangster ships the boy off to the city, but keeps the girl behind. He cold-bloodedly kills the one man who attempts to protect her, and then drags her off to a tawdry room in the city.

Gargan, the lawyer, is assigned to defend the man falsely accused of the murder, and, in his search for evidence, uncovers the fact that the gangster was on the scene of the crime. He locates him in the city; goes to the room and is horrified to discover the girl with him.

"Cavalcade"

Fox Film Corporation brings "Cavalcade" to the screen of the King's Theatre on Wednesday.

This drama whose theme is the effect of world events on the home and family has been hailed as the greatest written in the English language in a score of years. The author, Noel Coward, known for his successes, enjoyed the distinction of having his play run for a year at the Drury Lane Theatre in London.

A staff of experts was sent from Hollywood to see the play and to photograph it for reference. Another large staff was put to work on the research necessary to bring a story that covers the colourful period from 1900 to 1933 to the screen with absolute accuracy of costumes, equipment and historical backgrounds.

More than six months of preparation by a staff that numbered 200 preceded the actual star of production.

REICHSTAG FIRE

PRECAUTIONS TAKEN AT LEIPZIG

Berlin, Sept. 17.

It is officially stated that no aeroplanes will be allowed to fly over Leipzig from September 17 until November 11, in order to prevent any disturbance during the trial of the Reichstag incendiaries. —Reuter.

Captain Reginald C. Berkeley, distinguished English play right, was brought over from London to adapt the play for the screen. Frank Lloyd, twice winner of the Academy award for the best production of the year, was chosen as director.

Hollywood, New York and London were scoured for the very best actors and actresses fitted by education, training and experience to interpret the 40 principal roles. Three members of the original Drury Lane cast were brought from London to re-enact their parts before the camera; and two other London favourites were also signed for leading roles.

The story of "Cavalcade", is the story of the Marryot family, Jane, Robert, their two sons, Joe and Edward; and their servants, Ellen, Bridges and their daughter, Fanny.

While it is etched on a background of historical events of the last 33 years, the story itself is the principal feature; its joys, loves and tragedies is always uppermost. Its theme is universal.

Diana Wynyard and Clive Brook have the roles of Jane and Robert Marryot, Ursula Jeans plays Fanny Bridges; Herbert Mundin is seen as Bridges; Una O'Conner portrays the role of Ellen; Irene Brown plays Margaret Harris; Merle Tottenham is seen as Annie; Frank Lawton as Joe Marryot, and John Warburton as Edward Marryot.

Other well kown players who have important roles are Margaret Lindsay, Beryl Mercer; Billy Bevan, Frank Atkinson, Mary Forbes and Brandon Hurst. Important child roles are enacted by Dick Henderson, Jr., Douglas Scott, Bonita Granville and Sheila MacGill.

"King of the Jungle"

Miss Stark, who served in a technical capacity during the filming of "King of the Jungle," wild-animal thriller now showing at the Queen's Theatre to record crowds, told Buster Crabbe, world champion swimmer featured in the picture; Frances Dee, who plays opposite him, and other members of the cast, one about an elephant, with the proverbial elephantine memory. The big animal was owned by Carl Hagenbeck, famed trainer and dealer, and knew and loved his master.

Hagenbeck sold the beast to a circus, and for 14 years never saw it. Then, one day, he visited the circus, which had made the purchase. Long before the elephant saw Hagenbeck, he heard his voice, and set up an exultant trumpeting and stamping. He kept up the din until Hagenbeck entered the ring. Then he joyously wrapped his trunk around him, lifted him up, and deposited him on his head.

WORLD CRISIS

A WAY OUT

By FREDERICK COPE, A.M.I.E.E.

Mr. Cope's striking articles on the world economic crisis which were recently published in the Hongkong Telegraph are now available in pamphlet form.

One of the features, repaying study, is the close similarity between the plan of reform suggested by this local writer, and certain aspects of the Roosevelt recovery programme. The author's ideas are naturally far too advanced for active promotion at the present time, but they are particularly interesting in view of the fact that President Roosevelt, in striking out on a path of his own, has travelled in the same direction.

A BILLION YEN LOAN

GENERAL ARAKI'S DEMAND

Tokyo, Sept. 13.

The Nichi Nichi asserted to-day that Gen. Araki is urging other members of Premier Saito's cabinet to float a domestic bonds loan for one billion yen which the War Minister declared to be necessary to strengthen the Japanese army and navy "in view of the strained international situation."

Gen. Araki proposes that emergency taxes yielding 50,000,000 yen a year be levied to pay interest and amortization charges on the loan, which would be handled apart from the regular budget.

The proceeds of the huge loan would be used to finance the navy's programme to build to the limits permitted under the London Treaty and complete the army's replenishment programme.

OPIUM FOUND IN WOMAN'S JUNK

FINED $5,000 OR YEAR IN GAOL

The possession of 150 taels of non-Government prepared opium aboard her boat, led to the appearance of Tam Yet, mistress of a junk, before Mr. Schofield in the Central Police Court this morning. Defendant pleaded guilty and was fined $5,000 or one year's gaol. The junk and the opium were confiscated.

Revenue-Officer Grimmitt said he found the opium in three sacks underneath the seat on which the woman was sitting, on Saturday morning. Defendant stated that someone had brought the opium on Thursday saying that he would return for it on Saturday.

TWO CHOPPER ATTACKS

WEEK-END INCIDENTS IN THE CITY

Fung Lum, unemployed, and Lui Sing, of no fixed occupation, were charged before Mr. Balfour in the Central Police Court this morning with assaulting Tse Yu, a shoemaker, and Lau Kwan, a coolie, respectively.

In the first case, it was stated by Detective Sergeant Suter that the complainant, Tse Yu, was asleep on the third floor of 60, Bridges Street, when he was attacked. The inmates were aroused and heard someone running down the stairs. They looked over the verandah and saw the defendant bolting. He was caught and brought back to the house where he admitted having struck Tse Yu with a chopper.

Mr. Balfour: It was a premeditated attack, wasn't it?

Sgt. Suter: Yes, your Worship.

Manila, Sept. 15.

The Philippines Legislature spent another fruitless day yesterday trying to reach a definite understanding on the right method of disposing of the Hawes-Cutting-Hare law.

Senate President Quezon met with majority senators and subsequently with Senator Sergio Osmena, minority leader, but was unable to announce any definite choice between the plebiscite proposal and a national convention.

He declared that the majority senators had no strong preference between the plebiscite and national convention schemes but that the minority members of the legislature appeared inclined to favour the convention plan in the face of the apparent impossibility of getting the majority to amend the plebiscite bill.

The solution to the dilemma did not seem any nearer than it was weeks ago when the representatives announced their intention to see the plebiscite plan through while the minority as tenaciously insisted that the plebiscite bill must be amended if the legislature wanted it adopted.

The situation took on a new angle when reliable sources reported that the majority senators were lining up against the plebiscite in favour of the convention plan.

BANISHED SCHOOL TEACHER

FOUND TRESPASSING IN HIS OLD SCHOOL

Yip Tak, unemployed, formerly a teacher at the Chi Tak School, Yu On Terrace, was sentenced to twelve months' hard labour by Mr. Schofield in the Central Police Court this morning on charges of breaking and entering the school premises and returning from banishment.

Inspector M. H. Hourihan, of West Point, said the defendant forced his way into the premises between five and six o'clock in the morning. He was found by one of the teachers looking through the desks and books. He was formerly employed there as a teacher. He had two previous convictions for theft.
